AUTHORS AMONG FRUITS.

THE BANQUET OF THE PUBLISHERS.

GENIUS IN THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

SEVEN HUNDRED GUESTS AT TABLE.

Letters—Toasts—Speeches—A Festival Entertainment.

The long promised Banquet tendered by the Book Publishers' Association of this City to the Authors, came off at the Crystal Palace last evening. In the morning weather the day prior, the Publishers noticed no patch. Everything was ordered upon a scale of great variety and elegance. The viands consisted almost wholly of fruits. The beverages were sparkling champagne and Rhenish punch. The tables were laid with the utmost taste and magnificence. Upon each plate was placed a card, bearing the name of a guest. The caterers of the occasion were CORNELIUS & STEPHENS, whose entire corps of waiters—two hundred and fifty—was transferred from the Astor House.

In front of the Parthenon stood, winding upon a lofty pedestal, the famed Greenwoodite. Upon this occasion it received a hundred fold of the glitter of jewels. From the other extremity hung a card, bearing the inscription, "Hey Diddle Diddle, the Cat and the Fiddle." The appropriate emblem was a gift from the New-York Horticultural Society.

Above, carved in the gallery, so that it cast a glow upon Hall's Band that discoursed the finest of instrumental music till the evening ended, hung an illuminated motto in gas-work. It read as follows:

COMPLIMENTARY FÊTE AND FLORAL FESTIVAL
TO AUTHORS:
BY THE ASSOCIATION OF NEW-YORK PUBLISHERS.
September 27, 1855.

Below this was suspended another illumination, also in gas-work:

HONOR TO GENIUS:

Still further below, hung on the edge of the northern gallery, was a device representing the Muse of History, conducted to the Historical Temple, in gas-work, the hour of the dinner commenced by a brilliant crowd, formed of minute points of light. The effect of this work was exceedingly elegant. Beneath it that it either candy, overshadowing the hour and of the hour.

Back of the Dais, the theater position about on the main body of the building, and above it was a gallery to which the ladies had access.

At each lady's place it table, lay a small bouquet, wrapped in flimsy. The number of ladies who occupied seats in the main Hall was very small—probably there were not above fifty in all. In the galleries there were fifty additional, and nine-tenths of these ladies. All the pieces in the Palace from which a view of the Congressing Hall could be obtained were occupied.

A strong force of Police was present, in uniform, and excellent order was preserved upon the floor by a detailed force under command of Sergeant Jones.

THE BANQUET.

Promptly at half past eight, the guests entered the Hall and took their places. Samuel Appleton, Esq., President of the Association, presided. At his right sat Right Reverend Dr. Potter, Episcopal Bishop of this Diocese, who invoked the Divine blessing. A force and eloquence was manifest in the utterance of the Bishop which powerfully in order. Gentlemen with ladies and gentlemen without that privilege, sitting condescended to be polite, and displayed excellent capabilities of enjoyment. The beverages were coffee, tea and the sparkling and excited of liquids.

The President's table was honored by the presence of many familiar faces. WASHINGTON IRVING was there—fresh and genial, and the object of universal remarks. Dr. VALENTINE MOTT sat on the left of Mr. APPLETON, and near him Rev. GARDINER SPRING, President WHEDON, Principal of the Free Academy; President WOOLSEY, of Yale College; Hon. CHARLES KING, President of Columbia College; Judge DURR, HENRY C. CAREY, Rev. Dr. ROMEYN and his lady, ("Talvi,") Professor DUYCKINCK, Judge JAY. Towards the eastern end of the table were Mayor WOOD and Hon. J. V. C. SMITH, Mayor of Boston, Rev. Dr. TYNG, Rev. H. WARD BEECHER, Rev. E. H. CHAPIN, Rev. Dr. GUROSS, Mr. O. BRYANT, Hon. ROBERT T. CONRAD, and Prof. S. F. B. MORSE. Among the persons at table we noticed, in the list of ladies, Mrs. SOUTA, (late Miss ANNE C. LYNCH,) Mrs. SIMONNEY, "MINNIE MYRTLE," ANNA CAREY, Mrs. SUTHERLAND, of Washington, and the Misses WILKES. Ex-Mayor HARPER, Rev. Mr. MILBURN, N. P. WILLIS, and a host of well-known faces—publishers, authors, and paper makers—were among the party. It was altogether a brilliant assemblage of the literary people of the City and its vicinity. On no former occasion has there been an opportunity to enjoy the sight of so many very great lions at once.

LETTERS FROM INVITED GUESTS.

Letters in response to invitations were received from the historian PRESCOTT, Rev. Hermon MANN, Horace Greenwood, Hon. Edward Everett, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Dr. John W. Francis, Dr. Francis Lieber, Rev. Henry Giles, Brother W. Ellsworth, John Grigg, Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, Mrs. Sarah J. Hale, and others. Limited space forbids their publication.

Mr. EMERSON writes:

"The fraternal meeting of the authors and publishers of good books, I must think one of the fairest omens for mankind."

HORACE MANN says:

Your Crystal Palace is as famous a place as Mount Olympus; and the men and women whom you will assemble there will constitute a much more respectable company; and, I doubt not, will have a longer dynasty, than those who convened at the court of Jupiter. If there be any Mythological atheism in this, I hope my classical friends will pardon me. In such a company it would be an honor to be one out of the Dii Minores. But I am one of the Lares only, stationed at a distant hearthstone, and must remain and take care of the interests of my small family.

Mr. PRESCOTT sent a letter:

"If means should be by fortune, will you allow me to send you one?"

The Complimentary Festival to Authors and Publishers—Mr. Irving's style we shall know them.

GEORGE GREENWOOD has always something pleasant to say:

May you all find "it good to be there," and among the fortunes fruits spread before you, may no "apple of discord" have place.

Hon. ROBERT C. WINTHROP writes of the influence of Publishers:

I know not a body of men within the limits of our wide-spread Republic, who, associated upon just principles, might wield a mightier power for good, than the Publishers and Booksellers of America. The Press, in one of its greatest departments, is in their keeping. Upon them, in no small degree, it depends what shall be the character of the reading, by which the American mind is to be trained up to the Sixteenth century of our Republic. Theirs is the duty of discriminating between true and false, between a spirit of patriotism, they would put the best of their resources upon anything which would minister to a depraved appetite or feed the wild vagaries of a wild brain; they would allow an amount of gain which others would exaggerate, and would not see high fees of all the danger which is threatening us, that our library may run into licentiousness.

Mr. HALE sent with her letter a volume of poems—"Poems Moore, or the Child of Love"—and referred to pages 18 and 20.

Mr. BARR, of Philadelphia, wrote a brief declination, stating as his excuse the absence of a Hebrew Fast-day, (the Tabernacles,) and added a sentiment:

"Authors, Printers, Publishers and Booksellers—Their conduct forms lessons for intellect of millions of inhabitants of this great Republic."

Hon. EDWARD EVERETT begged to be excused on account of ill-health.

Rev. HENRY GILES discussed yesterday of Literature:

Literature is the great common field where all minds are gathering our concepts in harmony, and in which the humanities and charities of our race are seen to be inseparable and universal. The glory of literature is its universality which is noisy Amazon to die, and then amidst the sentiment of nature and the changes of age, the gathers up what is abiding in affection, and what is worthy of immortality, and bears it through the ages. Hence, Homer and CHAUCER—from old GRAVCER, through Shakspeare, SPENSER, BACON, and from PLATO to BURKE.

SPEECHES.

Mr. G. P. PUTNAM, Secretary of the Book Publishers' Association, read an introductory statistical sketch of the Progress of American Literature, the association of Publishers was formed eighteen years ago, at the City Hotel. Then, like this, was intended to promote friendly social intercourse.

Mr. PUTNAM gave the following statistics of Books:

The records of American Publications, for the twelve years ending in 1853, show an aggregate of 1,115 different works. Of these, 623 were original, and 492 were reprints from foreign books. The full list of reprints would show very nearly the same number on the origin main, viz: an average of 52 of each, per annum. In the year 1854, there were 723 new works published in the United States, of which 276 were reprints of English works, 25 were translations of foreign works, and 422 (in large proportion) were original. Comparing these with the records of increase of about 50 per annum, then, "twenty years ago." As the average for the number of the population of the United States at the same time—great as it was—average number of 50 per cent, it appears that literature and the book trade advanced ten times as fast as the population.

Mr. PUTNAM was exceedingly complimentary to the great talents in American literature, glanced at the progress made in educational education—and finally, the work, by spirited elegantly expressed, that we no longer rely for intellectual sustenance upon the fruit of British minds.

The statistics were very authentic.

REGULAR TOASTS—THE ACADEMY.

There were seventeen regular toasts, but to all of them responses were made.

Mr. BRYANT was assigned to respond to "The Republic of Letters," but he did not appear.

To the second toast—

American Literature—The youth gives brilliant promise of an honorable future; may its riper years show that it has been trained in the right schools.

Wm. C. BRYANT responded happily. He was received with a burst of applause, and, when he could be heard, exclaimed that he was not the man the company should have called for. His superior modesty led him to say that there were worthier representatives of American Literature around him. He spoke of the time when he first appeared before the public as an author—traced the changes in the popular feeling in regard to writers—and called up the memory of honest old Cotton MATHER, whose works counted up to as many days as there are in the year; and since whose time Literature has had much to learn. For more than a century after his time, the procession of American authors was a straggling one; now it is improving and increasing—it has brilliant essayists, learned metaphysicians, erudite philosophers. Every bush has its poet, starting up like the armed soldiers of ROBERTS DEW from behind the rock and beneath the heather. What an immense Literature is that of our school-books! Will anybody undertake to enumerate the works that relate to questions of geography? Is there any end to the grammars? Can there be any complete catalogue of the authors who have toiled to make science easy by induction, by illustration, by the easy? Equal to that is the Literature that provides for the entertainment of the young. Not many years ago, Mr. B. said, he was in the Capital of the Isle Island of Malta, and was not displeased to find in his own Library a complete assortment of American books, selected by Richard Rush, and comprising the writings of Miss Sedgwick, Mrs. Hemans, and others of our female authors. Sedgwick was called Mr. BRYANT's favorite. Sedgwick, it has been said, was the second author of Authors. This he doubted. It has been said, too, that the Sedgwick gives a tone to the whole of the author. What can Sedgwick do for the author? Sedgwick, he said, was a good writer, there would be no reading public without Sedgwick, there would be no reading public without Sedgwick, there would be no reading public without Sedgwick

These great events terminate the siege of Sebastopol, properly so called, for the allied armies have isolated it, and have gained their objects of their enterprise. They have wrested from the vast military power of Russia a fortress which she had converted into a place of arms of ordinary strength, and defended with prodigious loss of her best troops. They have annihilated the naval power of which she related to secure her supremacy in the Euxine, and to constitute her authority from the Crimea of the Caucasus to the mouth of the Danube. But above all, they have shown the calmness and resolutions actions of the Kings that the [illegible] who [illegible] the [illegible] Russian soldiers were invincible which no rebuffs, I now appear from Alma, Inkerman and Sebastopol that the mortal foes of both nations each part in the attack, and throw shells against the central bastion, so that from the heights of Inkerman to Strelezka Bay the whole distance was encompassed with a storm of fire, and an extraordinary number of men must have been engaged in the works. Nevertheless, upon this field of exhibitions of General Bosquet's division of the French Army in the Mainland Turkish Division of Sardinian troops instantly proceeded to execute a prearranged plan for the destruction and evacuation of the town. All that night the harbor was illuminated by the lurid glare of burning ships, and from time to time the explosion of vast magazines rent asunder enormous piles of masonry, while an all-devouring conflagration swept like the scourge of Heaven over the devastated city. Sebastopol has perished, like Moscow, by the hands of her defenders, while her conquerors looked on without the awful spectacle unscathed. Means of retreat had been secured by a long bridge of rafts across the great harbor, and first the whole large mass of troops and stores moved by this passage to the northern side; but at 8 o'clock in the morning of the 9th the communication was stopped, the whole of the works and town being then evacuated. If, as is probable, any of the Russians remained to the fourth and fifth day after that hour, they must either have perished in the fire or fallen into the hands of the belligerents. About 500 of the wounded, we know, remained in the Fort St. Paul, and for them an armistice was asked; but, with their accustomed hardihood and indifference to the preservation of life and property, the Russians were determined to destroy the city rather than to capitulate, and they executed their design.

The position of Prince GORTSCHAKOFF's army, after the main body has effected its retreat across the harbor, was, therefore, as follows: His extreme right, consisting of the corps most actively engaged in the defence of the place, rested on the Bay of Sevastopol, in Stony Point, and holds the strongly intrenched positions on the north shore, where, no doubt, considerable preparations have been made for this emergency. His centre covers the Belbek, and is protected in front by the field-works thrown up along the ridge of Inkerman. His left wing consists of LIPRANDI's corps, occupying the ground from Mackenzie's Farm to the heights of Aitodor on the Sevastopol road. No attempt was made by the allies to cut off the retreat of LIPRANDI to effect a junction with the main body, and the 6th and 7th divisions of the 16th Russian Infantry to have reached the camp; that the losses of the Tchernaya were not to be carried; that the losses of the general assault and the occupation of the southern side by the Allies entirely changed the strategical positions of the combatants, and that the objects of the campaign. The struggle for the possession of Sebastopol is at an end. That prize is in our hands, and all the defences of the fortress and the harbor are the grand object of the Russians, they have nothing left on that spot to contend for. The more compact position of the North side of the port is a heavy advantage, for, though it might hold a garrison, it cannot shelter a defeated army, and it is obvious that, after the retreat of her main force, all the ability and generalship of the Russians will be required to save the whole body of their forces in the Crimea from destruction. We therefore infer that the Northern fort will rather be held for a time by a limited garrison, or even probably altogether abandoned in the hope of saving the army. Never was an army in a more critical position. They are confined within a peninsula which the sea and no other fortified position, nor even the fire of the troops and no water beyond a certain limit. The sea covered with hostile fleets surrounding their sides of this theatre of war, and the fourth is occupied from the Russian base of operations by stepping-off positions. The allied armies already occupy strong posts one at Baptschi and Yenikale, which can be reinforced in a few hours by sea, so as to threaten the Russians in their flank and rear; and while it is impossible for the enemy to hold his ground in the South of the Crimea—for which, indeed, there is now no further object—to retreat in this season across the country is a formidable undertaking, while the loss of a battle in the open field would be absolute destruction. The Russians are in a trap, from which the Tchongar road and the isthmus of Perekop are the only means of escape, and even then their communications may possibly be intercepted.

No doubt, all these contingencies have been foreseen; Prince GORTSCHAKOFF's plan of campaign has long at see means; judging, therefore, from the determined action of the Russian army, he will be from the extreme difficulty of his present position, we incline to the opinion that he will adopt the course of a general and immediate retreat. To hold the Crimea without Sebastopol, and even after the harbor of Sebastopol itself has been transformed by conquest into the base of operations of the hostile armies, would be a hopeless and impracticable task, and the danger is greatly aggravated by the fact that the whole body of the Allies, with unlimited means of naval transport at their command, will shortly be at liberty to advance upon any part of the peninsula, which is accessible from the coast. These immediate consequences of their own success in the close of the campaign have been anticipated by the Allied Generals, and the moment is now arrived when they may [illegible] which the reduction of Sebastopol was the first preliminary. That field operation of the utmost have now been completed by the Allied Governments is obvious from the [illegible] high severity there they have conducted to send to the Crimea. The British army alone sent up upwards of 4,000 mules and tenses into the field and the French cavalry is still more numerous. The location of the Russian to which it has [illegible] Hitherto the contest in the Crimea has been confined to one single object, and, with the exception of the [illegible] of September, the Allies and the Russians march to Bakhtiara, [illegible] fear without a single material [illegible] shown, in our humble opinion, [illegible] qualities since he assumed the command, and he has been ably supported by General SIMPSON; but the present state of his affairs [illegible] of a still higher and more brilliant order. The Russian army in the Crimea is [illegible] to the forces of the allies in numbers, and it is immeasurably inferior to them in resources and supplies, as well as in those moral qualities which so [illegible] into and enhance the prestige of victory. Our every position on which they have encountered an enemy in this war—whether Turks, Russians, English or Sardinians—the forces of our [illegible] have deserted the Russian cause. For them to advance is impossible, for the whole [illegible] by the enemy, and no Russian vessel floats on those waters. The strong [illegible] in the Crimea has accumulated during the last two years in [illegible] for the subjugation of the East has been reduced to a blood-stained ruin by the troops, who were glad to escape with life from its burning walls; and the question on which the situation of Europe is now fixed is [illegible] the fall of Sebastopol, but how is the Russian army to escape from the Crimea, or to maintain itself there? We want that no considerations whatever will prevent the allied Generals from giving the most vigorous and immediate effect to the great advantage they have won. Beyond all that absolutely required for the security of our troops and our allies, [illegible] should be conducted. To give the enemy no respite, no [illegible] effect. The enemies must now be pursued, defeated and completed. The Russians are a people who will deny to the last that any advantage has been gained over them, and Prince GORTSCHAKOFF boasts in his concession of this sanguinary defeat that he was extremely successful in carrying off his army. Fighting, as they are, in almost [illegible], without the means of escape, the defeated Russian army should be compelled to lay down its arms or to fight a general action, which would crown the series of our successes by a still more decisive victory. The Peninsula itself is [illegible] and wailing, invested by the Allies and [illegible] the [illegible] of a single road be [illegible] lines of retreat and the only line by which reserves and supplies can reach the Russians, is gone. Such are taken to be the relative position of the belligerents in the Crimea, and, with the [illegible] of action of the Opposed of the Russian and English Governments, we have confident hopes of a glorious result.

Another Attempt to Assassinate the Emperor of the French.

From the Montreur, Sept. 6.

His Majesty, the Emperor, attended a representation at the Italian Opera last night.

At the moment the carriage in which was seated the Ladies of Honor of Her Majesty, the Empress, stopped infront of the theatre an individual, standing on the foot pavement opposite the door, without taking aim, fired small pocket pistols at the carriage.

No one was hit. The person, who appears to be a maniac rather than an assassin, was immediately arrested.

The name of the individual arrested is BELLEMARE. He is about 30 years of age, and was born at Rouen. When he was 16 he was punished to two years imprisonment for swindling.

At the expiration of two months the Emperor, then President of the Republic, commuted his sentence. He appears to have subsequently taken an active part in the events of the 2d of December, to have fought behind one of the barricades of the Rue Rambuteau. (At that time he was [illegible] "Motives for the Commutation to Death of Louis NAPOLEON" were seized by the police. During the examination BELLEMARE declared himself to be the author of those placards. He was sentenced by default to two years imprisonment, and was transported to Belle Isle.

Since he left prison, in February last, he lived at Paris under a false name, and had accepted an appointment as clerk to M. [illegible]. BELLEMARE is a man of delicate constitution and of unclean appearance. His antecedents, his language, his attitude after his arrest and during the examination show that he is really a maniac. He had taken up a position at the entrance of the Rue Marcouller on the foot pavement opposite to the entrance to the theatre, and he had thirty pistols at the moment when the cries of "Vive l'Empereur" made him (they say) the carriage which conveyed the Ladies of Honor of the Empress was that of His Majesty. A city policeman on duty, at the point, immediately pulled down the assassin's arm and captured him at once.

BELLEMARE was brought to the Police office at the Italian Theatre, and at 11 o'clock, M. PIETRI, Prefect of Police, presiding, a first examination was drawn up by the Commissary of Police of the District. The assassin is locked up in a cell at the Conciergerie, where he is undergoing an examination. The investigation continues.

His Majesty the Emperor, on his entrance into the Theatre, where the news of this criminal attempt was immediately known, was greeted with shouts of "Vive l'Empereur" and by rounds of applause, which were renewed at intervals.

His Majesty only remained about one hour at the Theatre and then proceeded to the Palais de la Tuilerie."

City Crime—Remedies Suggested.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Sept. 26, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: I have just read your article in to-day's paper headed "Our City Crime." I have long been of the opinion that if we had a Court sitting daily to try criminals immediately, and when found guilty for punishment to follow at once, that the heinous crimes which are constantly occurring would be materially lessened. The certainty of punishment would deter those monsters who perpetrate them, and in a short time the evil would become fewer in number, and it is to be hoped would in time cease altogether. It was part of Judge Lynch's code in California that it was punishment certain and quick which cleared that State of the vagabonds who had gone there from every country in the world. We are getting from bad to worse, and without prompt measures are taken, to suppress the desperadoes in the City, crime must continue to increase with increase of population. Your more cultivated intellect and ready pen can bring something before the public if you should coincide with the writer. Please give it your consideration. The press can help to stay these evils by speaking out. I only regret my inability to treat the subject as the times demand.

Crops in Texas.

HOUSTON, Saturday, Sept. 15, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The Fall of the year finds the citizens of the Star State in the most prosperous circumstances. Corn is more abundant than it has been known to be for many years. The average price throughout the State is not more than fifty cents per bushel, and in many sections it can be bought much lower. In the middle and northern Counties a good Wheat crop has been realized.

From all parts of the Union we hear of a very large number of persons, of a desirable character, who intend to emigrate to Texas during the approaching season. We were never better prepared to comfortably sustain a heavy immigration.

Unconstitutionality of the Fugitive Slave Law Acknowledged.

From the Charleston Mercury.

Of the action of Massachusetts in abrogation of the Fugitive Slave Law we have no complaint to make. It was from the first a miserable illusion; and worse, in fact, for it was an [illegible] of one of the most cherished principles of the Constitution, which provides that fugitives from labor, "upon demand, shall be delivered up," but gives no power to Congress to act in this affair. The tenth amendment to the Constitution provides that "the powers not delegated to the United States are reserved to the States, or to the people." The clause above confers no power, but is the naked declaration of a right, and the power, not being conferred, results to the States as one of the incidents of sovereignty, too dear to be trusted to the General Government. Our Southern members strove for the passage of the law, and spoke honestly; but it shows the evils of our unfortunate condition, that, in the urgency of one concert with an aggressive adversary, we lose the landmarks of principle, to obtain an illusive triumph, we yielded the Government to assume a power not conferred by the instrument of its creation, and to establish a precedent by which, in all after time, it will be authorized to assume whatever rights may have no constitutional organs of enforcement; and wearied with so many efforts to confine the Government to its limits of its legitimate powers, we are pleased to have assistance from another quarter, and if the question shall be determined in her favor, we will sincerely rejoice in such a vindication of the Constitution.

RICE CULTURE IN TEXAS.—We learn that one hundred bushels of Rough Rice per acre have been realized on the Trinity lands, near Liberty. Six hands are said to be adequate to the cultivation of one hundred acres of land in rice. Why should not Texas not only grow all the rice needed for home consumption, but also a large quantity for exportation? Probably are admirably adapted to the production of Rice. Will not some of our intelligent and enterprising farmers try the experiment?

A Bedouin Arab stallion has just arrived in Philadelphia, of the celebrated Kyian breed in eastern Arabia. He is of gray color and four years old; $15,000 has been refused for him, and his owner requires $12,000. The horse was 100 days on shipboard, during which time he never laid down. He is said to be in excellent health.

NEW-YORK CITY.

THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Proceedings With Regard to the Indicted Alderman—Attempt to Force Them Out of Office.

AN EXCITING SESSION.

The Board of Aldermen held its usual meeting yesterday. After some preliminary business of little interest, Alderman LOAN offered a resolution that the Aldermen of the Third Ward (MOSES) be expected to withdraw from the Board, pending the indictment of the Grand Jury against him.

The President decided the resolution to be out of order, on the ground that it transcended the rights of the Board, which had no power to expel its members:—they could only be removed by impeachment.

Alderman LOAN appealed from the decision. The resolution, he said, did not propose to expel the Alderman; it only requested him to withdraw. Such a resolution he thought the Board had the undoubted right to pass,—and he was perfectly convinced of its propriety. Out of respect to the Board he thought the indicted members ought to withdraw.

Alderman VOORHIS sustained the Chair. These indictments, he said, had all been found on the testimony of a single witness; and he, moreover, an interested party, who had sworn to a palpable falsehood. The whole movement had been got up on the stop-thief principle, and would prove to have been the result of personal spitefulness and political hostility. He thought those who had created the gallows should be very likely to send to swing upon it. If either of the Aldermen should follow the Mayor's advice, and withdraw. If not, let him stand his ground. If the Board were to pass such a resolution, and force members out of office because a witness had been induced to lay the basis of an indictment against them, no man was safe. It was a very easy way of silencing a man's vote and disfranchising a Ward. He hoped it would not be countenanced.

Alderman TWEEDY thought it very proper that the indicted Aldermen should withdraw. The Grand Jury, which found the indictments, was composed of very respectable persons. He could not sustain the Chair.

Alderman FOX believed political and personal malice to be at the bottom of the whole movement.

Alderman KELLY believed the Mayor was free from all connection with this matter,—that he was as honor to the City, and that the Aldermen indicted should be honorably acquitted.

Alderman BURGE would sustain the Chair. He might doubt Alderman LOAN's honesty, because he had found him sustaining some very dishonest persons. The Grand Jury had acted upon very insufficient testimony; Walter K. Jones was a man in whom he would place no confidence. The "Reformers" were not the only honest people in the world.

Alderman FOX also vindicated the Reformers, and denied that they had spent a million and a quarter more than their predecessors.

Alderman CORNELIUS said if the case were his he should withdraw.

Alderman HENRICKS said the Board had nothing to do with the indictment of the wicked; nor had it any right to prejudge the case by the adoption of such a resolution. He had the same right in the Board as any other member. If his proposition rejected the Board, let them appoint a Committee of inquiry and investigate the matter. He dared any man to accuse him of guilt. He dared the enemies to do their worst. The very judge, said he, appointed to try any man charged indicted for perjury in a neighboring County. The hounds are after me. $1,000 have been offered for any evidence that will blast my reputation and consign me to the felon's prison and my little family to ruin. A beautiful system this! But white I stand here conscious of my own innocence, I will not neglect the duty I owe to my constituents, and will not accept your invitation, even if I do spite the unauthorized. I shall go, that's a fact. Addressing himself to Alderman LOAN, he said: Find me a precedent of expulsion for a crime, one had seemed him of robbing the Treasury; no Alderman dared do so; but a certain distinguished functionary did get his fraud-stained hand into the public Treasury and stole $7,000, and the exposure and detection of this fraud is the source of all my trouble. Yes, he STOLE it. [Sensation.] Other men might be more conscientious than he, but he knew well that he enjoyed a just reputation for honesty. I make, said he, no extraordinary pretension; but I never cheated my partner, nor am I a man to form upon others who have deceived rascality enough to accomplish their own ends. People believe I am honest even in face of this indictment. No man believes me would steal. Gentlemen, I tell you, you will do me a foul wrong if you pass this resolution. Tell me to go, if you will, but do not do it in this half-way manner. If any one believes me capable of being bribed, let him vote against me. I am the scape-goat for all the sins of this Board. The Aldermen, addressing himself again to Alderman LOAN, declared he would stay where he was, and have some fun; he said he was full of fight, and would see it out. None of their half way instructions for him. With all due respect to the Alderman of the Eighteenth, he was not "coming right square up to the chalk." He did not like such a meeting invitation.

Alderman FOX said he should vote against the relief of the Chair.

Alderman VOORHIS said he would like to ask Alderman LOAN, whether this whole movement was not connected in his office.

Alderman LOAN said he would not deny that he was present at the meeting referred to, but he had no private animosity to gratify, nor did he care whether the Mayor was connected with this proceeding or not. The Board, he said, was not bound to condemn these parties innocent until convicted. The law did not do so. Their arrest, &c., was evidence that they were not presumed innocent. The Board could not say they were not guilty without accusing the Grand Jury of perjury.

Alderman VOORHIS again asked Alderman LOAN if he had not been invited to a meeting at the Mayor's office in reference to this very matter.

Alderman LOAN said he should refuse to answer.

The question was then put on reversing the decision of the Chair, with the following result:—

AYES—Aldermen Brown, Baird, Hoffmire, Voorhis, Sheers, Briggs, and C. H. Tucker—7.

NAYS—Aldermen Fox, Wm. Tucker, Kelley, Christie, Ely, Lord, and Verian—7.

The appeal was thus lost by a tie vote, and Alderman LOAN's resolution was ruled out of order.

The Board then adjourned until Monday.

Annual Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Clergy of the Diocese of New-York.

SECOND DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The Convention reassembled yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, at St. John's Church. It was very largely attended. After devotional exercises had been held, Dr. HAWKS announced that, owing to the unavoidable absence of Bishop POTTER, Rev. EVAN M. JOHNSON would, at the Bishop's request, take the Chair. After the reading of the minutes by the Secretary, and the transaction of some unimportant preliminary business, the Chairman announced that the business next in order was the reception of the report of the Committee on the incorporation of Churches.

Rev. Mr. LEONARD moved that the rules should be suspended, that he might put the motion respecting the amendments of the Constitution, of which he had given notice on Wednesday.

Rev. Mr. RICHMOND objected to the motion, on the ground that it would be unadvisable to admit any more Presbyters who had not the care of souls into the Convention. The Chairman said the question before the Convention was, whether Mr. LEONARD's resolution should be referred to the Committee on Canons. The vote was taken: Ayes 97; Noes 60. The resolution was therefore referred.

Several reports were then read. Among them was that of the Standing Committee of the Diocese, and of the Committee of the incorporation of Churches. The following Churches were, by vote, admitted into the Convention: St. Andrew's, Schoharie; Emmanuel, South Westerlo; St. Peter's, Elmsburg; St. James', Fordham; St. Paul's, Centreville; St. Augustine's, Croton; St. James', Caldwell. The report of Committee of Inquiry was then discussed. It was very long and interesting, and strongly recommended that immediate steps should be taken to provide larger salaries for the clergy in the rural districts. Among other measures, it asks and, the establishment of a Sustentation Fund were urged. The report of the committee on the Episcopal Fund was read. The amount of disposable fund reported was $67,500, all invested in bond and mortgage, at the following rates: $62,000 at 7 per cent., and 4,500 at 6 per cent. The accumulating fund is as follows: amount on bond and mortgage $12,000, cash on hand $116, received at last convention $950, received from parishes within the year $397, interest on investment $800; total $13,803. The committee on the amendment of the act for the incorporation of churches was, on motion, continued for another year, and were requested to submit the report to the next convention. The report of the trustees respecting the sale of the Episcopal residence in Franklin-street, occupied by Bishop ONDERDONK was read. It recommended the sale or lease of the premises, and that $600 of the proceeds should be annually appropriated to pay the rent of a suitable residence for Bishop ONDERDONK.

On motion of the Trustees of the Fund, for the support of aged and infirm clergy, were reflected. The report of the Missionary Committee was then read. The following are the statistics of Missionary operations: Receipts from interest for past year, $570; from individual donations, $1,227; contributions from churches, $6,000. There are 69 Missionary Stations in 27 Counties. The total expenditure in the past year, was $5,817.

The Report of the Trustees of the Fund for the support of Aged and Infirm Clergymen was then read by Dr. ECKERSLEY. It stated that since the last report of the Treasurer there had been received from the congregations and from donations, $4,748, which, with the interest on the fund invested and the balance on hand, made a total of $9,366. During the year $2,600 had been paid to clergymen, and $3,000 invested on bond and mortgage.

The Standing Committee on the Treasurer's accounts reported the same to be correct. It showed that the receipts of the year were $8,319; expenditures, $6,267; balance on hand, $1,052.

The Bishop then entered the Church, took the Chair and read his Address. It was his first Address since consecration to the Episcopate, and was listened to with great attention. He stated that he had visited 173 parishes, and confirmed 1,503 persons. He had consecrated 13 Churches—the largest number ever consecrated in one Diocese in one year.

He expressed severely the conduct of the clergymen in Brooklyn, who, contrary to rules, performed religious services over the remains of a woman of immoral character, and preached her funeral sermon. (Reported at the time, in the TIMES.) The Bishop, with her father, had committed suicide. It was an open and flagrant offence that he was compelled to notice it. Your clergymen had, however, in a very impudent manner, expressed his deep regret that he should have been led into such an error, and he (the Bishop) sincerely hoped that it was the last time the Church would be shocked by such conduct.

After the reading of this address, which occupied nearly an hour, some minor business was disposed of, and the Convention, which had sat six hours, adjourned until the Evening Session.

EVENING SESSION.

The Evening Session met at 7 o'clock. The following gentlemen were elected on the Standing Committee: William Berrian, D.D.; John McVickar, D.D.; Benjamin I. Haight, D.D.; Samuel E. Johnson, D.D.; Hon. Murray Hoffman; Floyd Smith, Esq.; Gerrit G. Van Wagenen, Esq.; Gouverneur M. Ogden, Esq.

The election of Deputies to the General Triennial Convention was postponed to the next annual Convention. On motion it was made a standing rule that a majority of the Convention should be sufficient for the election of officers.

The Report of the Committee of Canons, on Mr. LEONARD's motion for an alteration of the Constitution, was presented. The original motion admitted all Clergymen as members of the Convention and entitled to a vote.

The report proposed to exclude Deacons, and to provide that no clergyman should be allowed to vote who had not resided twelve months in his parish. Dr. HIGBY spoke at length and eloquently. Seveth strong ground in favor of the admission of the Deacons. If a clergyman were in good standing in the Church the Convention had no right to exclude him. Dr. HAWKS took the opposite side, and would exclude the Deacons. Rev. Mr. MONTGOMERY spoke warmly in their favor.

Dr. VINTON opposed, as did also Dr. TAYLOR, of Grace Church. Dr. HIGBY spoke again, vindicating his previous remarks. Hon. MURRAY HOFFMAN opposed the admission of the Deacons in a forcible speech, of which we have not room to give the faintest outline.

Much more speaking followed, and several new motions were made. Some of the speakers, although they were clergymen, exhibited "the chum in the flesh" and waxed a little angry, and finally at 10 o'clock they adjourned until 9 o'clock this morning, a motion to recommit the whole draft to the Committee on Canons having been, in due form, adopted.

Quacks and Quackery.

What a vast increase of the quackery business there has been in New-York during the last two years! Quacks have multiplied; there are no manufactories more numerous in our City now than those of patent medicines. There is no end of "wonderful cathaltics," "celebrated cordials," "renowned vermifuges", "infallible syrups," "extraordinary ointments," &c., &c. There are pills and plasters, balsams and [illegible], lotions and liniments without number; all manufactured by the bushel, and each capable of curing all the diseases that flesh is heir to. All the patient has to trouble himself about is to see that the name or initials of the original manufacturer is only labeled on the nostrum he chooses; then let his ailment be what it may—no matter how chronic or complicated—he has only to buy bottles enough, or boxes, and see them "as directed," to become in a short time as well as ever, if not a great deal better than if he had never been sick at all. In short, it matters not whether you have the diarrhea, or the mumps, whether your wife has too much unemployed time on her hands, or you are afflicted with bunions, soothache, or cholic, apply to any one of the numerous fraternity of quacks or their "recognised agents," and a perfect and everlasting cure will be guaranteed to you "on the most reasonable terms."

It is curious to observe—and it should encourage all to keep trying,—how many, after having failed at some half dozen or other callings—(such as those of tailor, cobbler, hack-driver, &c., &c.,) become renowned as quack doctors. True, this quack has not unfrequently, so much of the modesty of genius, that, content with receiving their profits himself, he is willing to let others enjoy the honor of his wonderful specifics. For example, we know an ex-City Father who is the inventor of certain pills, and of a species of ointment which nothing but death has ever been known to fail, and who, while he manufactures the pills in buckets and the ointment in barrels, is at the same time engaged in divers other sorts of business and speculations, and although he makes far more of the pills and ointment than all his other "operations" put together, he would not for the world have it known that he is a manufacturer of patent medicines.

There are scores of others among us like our friend the ex-Municipal Father. And no wonder that they are ashamed of their calling when they have any shame left; for, in sooth, they could scarcely be engaged in a more dishonest or pernicious business. It is really worse than that of the Peter Funks, who sell the brass watch for the gold one. The victims of the latter are merely defrauded of their money, while those of the former are defrauded of their money and health. They are a pest and a nuisance.

Obscene Publications and Pictures.

Strangers arriving in the City are continually annoyed by the importunities of a parcel of lazy scapegraces who make a business of hawking about obscene publications, and indecent pictures. They haunt every hotel, railroad depôt and steamboat landing, and thrust their disgusting wares on all that come in their way. It is in vain to tell them you don't want to buy; they will not only exhibit to you the nastiest daubs they have, but go on to explain them into the bargain; nor will they often retain from doing so even though you be accompanied by ladies. In fact there are some who are so much emboldened by long impunity, that they frequently expose those things to the ladies themselves, in order to be avenged of the gentleman for not buying. This shameful nuisance is not at all new; but lately it has become intolerable. Its effects are much worse than most people would think at first sight. Respectable people, who have come to years of understanding will not buy these things of course; not so with their sons and young friends. Hundreds of the innocent are induced to purchase them; the low and vicious purchase them from choice. The former, show them to their friends as curiosities; the latter exhibit them whenever they have an opportunity for mischief's sake.

It is hard to say whether these miscreants who act in this way, are more to blame than the mercenary fellows who get up these indecent publications. The painters and artists who have no higher ambition than that to pander to prurience and vice, deserve the perverest and most humiliating punishment. Conscious of their indecency, and nastiness, they withhold their names as a matter of course. But if the police were properly instructed, they could easily make them out. Why don't the Mayor see to it? His Honor cannot but have observed the nuisance. The mere fact that there are so many engaged in vending those loathesome things, is evidence that there must be numerous purchasers.

Policemen Wanted for the Park.

No wonder timid persons dread the creation of a great Park, when our little central one is given over so thoroughly to rowdies. A citizen, while crossing the Park at an early hour on Tuesday evening, was set upon by some ruffians, who knocked him down, and attempted to rob him. His cries for help attracted the attention of some persons in the vicinity, who hastened to his relief, whereupon the robbers fled. Occurrences of this kind are becoming so alarmingly frequent, that it is absolutely dangerous to trust oneself within the precincts of the Park after lamp-light. Not a policeman has been detailed for duty there, and it has become a resort for loafers and vagabonds of every kind, who, to facilitate their operations, are in the habit of putting out the gas-lights. Is the Park neutral ground? Has nobody charge over it?

The Deane Conversion to the Catholic Faith.

The conversion of G. HOBART DOANE to the Catholic faith, is the subject of two articles in the Freeman's Journal. It says of Mr. D.:—

"Some two years ago, with great earnestness of mind, he devoted himself to the Christian ministry, as he understood and had been taught it. About six months ago he was ordained by his father, and then, for the first time, he was called upon to put the truth of his religion to the practical test of a larger circle than that of his family home. He was called to face the people, and to preach to them those 'High Church' or 'Puseyite' doctrines that he had been brought up to look on as Catholic truth. With a clear mind, a bold and sincere heart, and an unsullied and unflinching resolution, Mr. DOANE began preaching those Catholic truths to the people who, he had been told, were in communion with the 'One Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church,' but whom he soon found to be merely a Protestant Episcopal congregation—who told him they were in communion with DR. TYNG, not Pope Pius IX.,—that he was preaching 'Popery,' and they would none of it. For Mr. DOANE it was now to choose between family and friends, or Christ; between the Catholic truths that he loved, or the Episcopal congregation that loved those not. The committee and the sacrifice was promptly, and [illegible] reconciliation—Mr. DOANE, instead of [illegible] his time with Christian and enlightening designs of his conscience, and evasions of his [illegible] to act as a man, freeing his allegiance to truth and the duty he owed to God. He visited the Catholic Bishop, as the natural way of solving the remaining doubts, if, indeed, he had any of them left. He approached the [illegible] of the night—he left him. He came to the light, but there he did not make-believe that he was blind, or pause to leave what he had grasped.

We look upon Mr. DOANE's conversion as the first fruits of an abundant harvest that is soon to be reaped from the ranks of Puseyite Episcopalians."

The Freeman's Journal does not exhaust itself upon the Churchman for his notice of this affair at present. It wrote:

"To see whether Bishop DOANE, for the sake of trying a little longer to keep his balance on the ridiculous and rickety stilts of Puseyism, continues of that feeble effort to send forth into a world of strangers, with the brand of insanity and the suspicion of untrustiness, a son of his own, whom he knows to be of a mind thoroughly sound and solid, and fast of promise;—but we wish to know if Bishop DOANE, as the means of fixing such suspicions on his son, has authorized the public attack on the sanity also of the wife whom long years ago he won on the promise of loving, cherishing, and protecting;—who is the mother of his children, and the companion of his old age? We wish to see if Bishop DOANE intends to proclaim himself the father of an insane family;—of daughters whom no prudent young man, in any station of life, would think of marrying, with such a hereditary taint in their blood;—of sons with whom no prudent young man would enter into business relations. We wait to see whether Bishop DOANE has made such a proclamation of an intended family catastrophe in his household;—and, if so, we wait to see what gentlemen among Episcopalians, think as will say about it."

Indictments.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The public do not generally reflect upon the case with which an indictment may be obtained before most of our Grand Juries.

On the completion and on parte testimony of the most strained knave the most remarkable offence may be indicted for a misdemeanor or crime of which he never dreamed. The testimony of one way had most called to contradict or explain it is to testimony to the Jury, and they are obliged by their oaths to find a bill.

I know a gentleman against whom a libel appeared in a country paper. The editor being called upon for his author cut out the libel and attached an extra-judicial affidavit that Mr. A. B., of New-York, furnished the libel;—the gentleman went before the Grand Jury with that statement, and being sworn, stated that he had received it from the editor;—on which Mr. A. B. was indicted for a libel.

The persons of the Common Council (I know not one of them) now indicted may be, and probably are, guilty, for aught I know, of the charges brought against them; but, I submit, the indictments are not proof—I may almost say no proof of their guilt.

It has often struck me, that if indicted, and innocent of an offence, instead of appealing to the public for a "suspension of opinion," as the phrase is, I should make my card, telling all who were so wise as to make up their minds on one side until they had heard the other, that they were welcome to do so as soon as they pleased, as I should not consider their opinions worth "suspending."

Still, very worthy though very thoughtless persons consider an indictment almost a conviction, and if the accuser is honorably acquitted, the "indictment," perhaps obtained by conspiracy, fraud and perjury, never hurts the complainant before the public, but the effect upon the mind against the innocent accused is never fully effaced; and this is the justice of the world. How cautious should our Grand Juries be of lending themselves to the vindictiveness of private revenge, often so ingeniously covered as to deceive the most penetrating. JOHN.

The New School, No. 11.

We had the pleasure of witnessing the opening exercises and drill of the pupils of the Boys' Grammar School No. 11, West Seventeenth-street, in the Sixteenth Ward, a few mornings since. The remarkable precision of step and promptness of action during various changes of the classes, which were all accomplished in much less time and with more perfect order than in any school, we have yet seen, demonstrate Mr. MOHLAN's method to be a valuable innovation. The boys were all in good humor and neat neck gear, with hair brushed tidily, which gave them quite a uniform appearance. The drill exercises were executed to music on the piano. The number of pupils present was 302. The system will be tried, and this is a very pleasant and encouraging school in all respects.

The Girls' Grammar School had an attendance of 284, but will accommodate twice that number. The furniture is of the best quality, including a fine-toned piano. The school is under the direction of Miss MARY S. PRESTON, Principal, and is in admirable condition.

The Primary School has an attendance of 267, and will seat over 1,000 children. The arrangements, class-rooms, &c., are all of a superior character. The building is the largest, and one of the best yet erected under the auspices of the Board of Education. Thos. R. JACKSON, Esq., the Architect, and Mr. Commissioner DELMARVEL, under whose care the structure was built, deserve credit for the intelligent and they have executed their trust in.

The Primary School is under the care of Miss M. L. MACFARLEN, a very superior and experienced Principal.

The Boys' Evening School for this neighborhood will be held this season in the rooms of the Boys' Grammar School No. 11, in this Ward, and will be under the care of Mr. Geo. W. COOPER, Vice Principal of the Grammar School.

The Girls' Evening School will be held in the rooms of the Girls' Grammar School No. 43, in Twenty-fourth-street. The School will be under the care of Miss SARAH STEWART, who is a teacher in the Boys' Grammar School.

☞ The most modest way of "stumping it" that we have heard of is exhibited in the following advertisement:

"At the request of the Eighth Ward National Club, Mr. AUGUSTINE DUGANNE, American Candidate for Assembly, will deliver a free lecture, at No. 185 Spring-street, on Thursday evening, Sept. 27; subject—"The Heroic Women of the Revolution."

Decisions in Admiralty on Appeal.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.—Sept. 27.

Before Judge Nelson.

Judge NELSON this morning rendered decision in the two following cases which were argued before him at the June Term of the Court. The cases were decided by the District Court by Judge Ingersoll.

BILLS OF LADING—CONSTRUCTION.

Charles Struver vs. The Ship Andover.—NELSON, C. J.—The libel in this case was filed by Struver to recover the value of ten bales of cotton, part of a cargo shipped at New-Orleans in the ship Andover, and consigned to the libelant at this port, he paying the freight. The bill of lading contained the clause, "Contents and weight unknown." The freight was to be paid at a certain rate per pound, and in the margin of the bill, figures 26,750 were given, apparently as the aggregate weight of the cotton.

On the arrival of the cotton, the consignees of the ship claimed that the figures in the margin of the bill of lading should govern in determining the weight, while the libelant insisted that, as the bill of lading mentioned "weight unknown," the cotton should be weighed, and freight paid accordingly. He offered to pay the freight on these terms, and tendered the money to be paid as soon as it could be ascertained. The test for the libelant, leaves the amount of the weight, the value of the cotton, less the amount of the freight.

There is nothing in the bill of lading indicating that the weight was agreed on between the master and shippers, but the contrary. For, notwithstanding the memorandum in the margin as to the supposed or real weight of the cotton, the master, as is apparent, required the insertion at the foot of the bill before he signed it, "Contents and weight unknown," thereby excluding any inference that the owner was to be bound by the memorandum. This memorandum is not even referred to in the body of the bill, so the reference there is obviously to marks and numbers on bales, which marks and numbers are given in the margin, and not to the

New-York Central Railroad Speculation Questioned.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

It is now almost two months since New-York Central Railroad Stock ceased to be dealt at the regular meetings of the Board of Brokers; in consequence the stock of this great Corporation has remained ever since without reliable quotations as to its market price. This is highly injurious to the interests of a large number of Stockholders, especially to those who might desire to realize by sale of their stock. The question, and a very important one it is, both to the Stockholder and the Broker is—who is to blame for this state of affairs? Stockholders residing out of this City, and even a very large number residing in the City, seem to take for granted, that the Board of Brokers having taken, improperly, an umbrage at the highly conservative course of their Directors, in adopting a new and more secure system of transfer, struck the stock from the list of their Board, and by a malicious act, as it is generally supposed, prohibited similar transactions in it. The question of blame is generally believed to be, that unless their Directors will return to the old system of transfer, the Brokers will persist in their opposition to the Company. It is to correct these unjust impressions that I have taken up my pen. The Brokers have never asked the New-York Central Directors to give up one iota of their new principle of transfer. I will even go further. Many of them being Stockholders in the Company to a very large amount, heartily approved of the course of the Directors in placing additional guards over their property. There is no difference of opinion between the Directors and the Brokers as to the principle per se. The Bank of Commerce in this City, the largest and certainly one of the most conservative institutions in this country, have had for a long time this very system in operation. It is, therefore, not a new thing, and the inventors, in point of principle, can lay no claim to originality. But while the stock of the Bank is regularly called at the Board of Brokers, that of the New-York Central Railroad can only be heard in whispers around the corners of the by-streets. Why is it so? The Bank, to recompense the Broker for the inconvenience of having deprived him of the privilege of a series of transfers on any given day, gives him a new certificate immediately the transfer is documented from an old certificate, while the New-York Central Railroad Company will neither allow a second transfer to give a certificate for each already to his name until the following day. I have carefully examined the wording of the new certificate, and also that of the "form of transfer," and can find nothing in them that can possibly be construed as a plea of the principle that no certificate can be issued until the day after the transfer is made! If the Directors would but consent to give the Broker some title to his stock when he comes in possession of it, the existing difficulty would at once be done away, and the stock, as matter of course, would again be called at the Board of Brokers. This request is not unreasonable, and as it neither violates the principle nor affects in the slightest degree the security of transfers, I think it is due to the interests of the Stockholder that the Directors should rescind this arbitrary rule, and adopt one more in accordance with the wants of those who act as agents for the buyer and the seller. As the matter stands at present, the difficulties are too great for a broker to overcome. If the stock is transferred to him and he is not provided at once with the means to pay for it, and has no means of his own to spare for that purpose, how is he to get along? He can borrow no money upon the stock, for no lender will make an advance without the title to the property, in some shape or other, is first placed in his hands as security for the loan. The Broker cannot get a title to his stock in any shape whatever until after the lapse of twenty-four hours. The Directors urge the necessity of delivering stock by certificate and power of attorney. This is done constantly now and will always be done whenever it is practicable; but it is not always that the buyer and seller can fit each other so exactly. One hundred shares cannot be delivered by "certificate and power" out of a certificate for one hundred and fifty shares, nor twenty-five shares out of a fifty-share certificate, &c. If a merchant, or even a speculator, is there a merchant who is not a speculator? buys cotton, flour, corn, wheat, sugars, molasses, &c., upon payment, he can at once obtain evidence of his property, and give half a dozen titles for it before the day is over. But the owner of fifty shares of New-York Central Railroad Stock, transferred to him on the books of the Company, can do nothing of the kind. If he is disappointed in the receipt of sufficient means to pay for it he must break, for his property is unavailable either for the purposes of sale or hypothecation, until twenty-four hours after it was passed in his name on the books of the Company. It may be that the Directors of the New-York Central Railroad Company can perceive at a long distance great advantages resulting to the stockholder from their tenacious adherence to such a point, unimportant in itself as regards the Company, but of vital consequence to the Broker. For my part I acknowledge myself blind to those great advantages, and if the present is the instrument of the future, there will be no great rejoicings among the stockholders.

No man of sense ought to blame the Brokers for not wishing to deal in a stock which hourly exposes them to the risk of not being able to meet promptly their engagements. A STOCKHOLDER.

New-York, Sept. 26, 1855.

Beef is also inactive, yet firm—150 bbls. were disposed of during the day at $11 50@$12 for Prime; $13@$14 for country Mess, and $16 50@$17 for repacked Mess, ⅌ bbl. Prime Mess Beef is dull and nominal. Beef Hams are rare and neglected. Butter attracts more attention; 15c @18c for Ohio; 18c.@20c. for ordinary to good State, and 22c.@26c. for good to choice do., ⅌ lb. Cheese is less active at 6@8½c. ⅌ lb.

RICE—The demand is moderate at former rates, with an increasing stock, though desirable qualities are rather scarce.

SUGARS—Display no particularly new feature; the sales since our last are reported at 1,500 hhds., mainly Cuba, at 7½c.@7¾c. per ⅌.

TALLOW—There were 10,000 lbs. prime taken at 11c. ⅌ ⅌.

WHISKY—Sales of 402 bbls. Ohio and Prison were effected at 30½c.@31c ⅌ gallon.

FREIGHTS—Were not so brisk. For Liverpool, the questions were for Cotton, 3d.@13-16d. ⅌ ⅌; Flour, 2s. 6d.@2s. 9d. and 4s. added, ⅌ bbl.; Grain, 11d.@12d. ⅌ bushel, in bulk and bags, and heavy goods, mainly 40s. ⅌ ton, with moderate engagements. For London and Glasgow there were but very light shipments at approximate figures. For other ports we have nothing really new to report.

FIRE AND EXTRA FINE BRANDS—Consisting of Ruggles, Hicks & Co.'s and York mills to sell per sample, by THOMAS F. DEVOE, Sec. Trust's Fulton Bank.

The News From Europe.

By the arrival of the America at Halifax and the Washington at this port, we are in possession of one week's later intelligence from Europe. The news is startling—announcing nothing less than the fall of Southern Sebastopol. A fierce bombardment was opened on the 5th of September, and on the 8th the Malakoff and Redan were, for the second time, assaulted by the French and English. Repulsed six times, the former at last succeeded in taking the Malakoff. With its capture the southern side of Sebastopol became untenable, and the Russians, having first destroyed the defences and the shipping, evacuated the city and retreated to the northern forts. The loss of life must have been enormous. The grand total is set down at 30,000 men, but we must wait for details ere we can arrive at any exact conclusion on this point. Five French Generals—among whom is General BOSQUET—are reported to have fallen. We have commented in a separate article upon this important event.

The siege of Sebastopol is now at an end, and the question naturally arises, What will be done next? It is barely possible that Prince GORTSCHAKOFF can retain possession of the Northern harbor, which the Allies are able to attack with superior advantages, both by sea and by land. Retreat, or a battle in a fair field, are then only resources left to him. In the latter case, his chances of success would be feint indeed, and, to prevent the former, a strong force has been dispatched along the coast to intercept his march towards Perekop. To all appearances the Russian army is threatened with complete annihilation. Its prestige, which arose from the heroic defence of Sebastopol, is gone; and the dominion of Russia in the Crimea has received a blow from which it may never recover. The game at least is now in the hands of the Allies.

No change has taken place in the position of affairs in the Baltic, with the exception of the moving of several ships from Cronstadt to Revel. This, together with the fact that a French transport had recently arrived at Nargen, with five thousand rockets of a formidable kind, has induced the belief that an attack on Revel was contemplated this season.

It has been asserted of late that Austria had at last given unequivocal signs of ranging herself on the side of the Western Powers. This report has been contradicted by the official Prussian Gazette, which states that no new diplomatic fact has taken place to justify in the least the rumor of an intended arrangement between Austria and the Western Powers, by which the former was to assume a decided position against Russia. The Vienna papers are even more decided. The Austrian Gazette, a semi-official organ, says that "where Russia has a GORTSCHAKOFF, an OTTEN SACKEN, and a TODLEBEN, one may smile at the pretensions of the French and English."

Another attempt has been made on LOUIS NAPOLEON's life. As the Emperor was going to the opera on the evening of the 7th inst., an individual named BELLEMARRE fired twice at a state carriage, supposing that it contained His Majesty. No damage was done. The man is said to be a maniac. He was instantly captured.

Austria is said to have offered her mediation to Denmark for the purpose of adjusting her difficulties with the United States.

A full summary of the news will be found on another page of this morning's paper.

The Fall of Sebastopol.

It is nearly a year since we were first startled by the announcement that Sebastopol had fallen. But that news proved false, and ever since the public ear has been open to catch the announcement of the news of the great feat which two of the mightiest nations of the Old World had combined their utmost powers to accomplish. It has come at last; superior power and skill have carried the day, as we have never doubted they would, and Sebastopol has fallen. The Allies have paid most dearly for their victory, and what benefits they are to reap from it remains to be seen. In the first flush of such a glorious victory there cannot, of course, be any plans formed for the future disposition of the prize which they have taken; but it will be likely to prove very nearly as troublesome hereafter, as it has been since the Allies commenced their attack upon it. The Times, in remarking on the splendid victory which has been obtained, very truly says, that now is the time when more brilliant talents are demanded in conducting the war than have yet been developed, and the Daily News sagaciously observes, that the blow which has just been struck is sufficient to insure their ultimate triumph, if it is promptly and vigorously followed up. Even the excitement of the moment, on the receipt of the great news, does not make the victors forget that there is fighting yet to be done, and that Sebastopol is not St. Petersburg. The dispatches of GORTSCHAKOFF, after the event, announcing his retreat, are full of confidence, and exhibit a degree of coolness which almost approaches to impudence. The effect of this great, and long looked-for event, on the affairs of Europe cannot easily be foreseen, but it must have an important influence on Austria and Prussia, and the other Northern Powers which have so long stood aloof from the contest, watching where the eagle of victory was likliest to alight.

The English papers are filled with exultant rejoicings, which must be greatly diminished by a recollection of what the victory has cost. A national thanksgiving has been recommended, and will doubtless take place, and, in cooler moments, the cost of the triumph, in blood and treasure, will then be reckoned.

The capture of the Malakoff, it is said, has cost the Allies thirty thousand lives; but to these must be added all that have been sacrificed since they first landed in the Crimea. The disasters of the Russians are terrific, and their losses beyond computation. Their stronghold in the Crimea is destroyed, and not a Russian ship is left afloat on the Euxine—not a Russian flag is seen in the Sea of Azof or the Dardanelles. The destruction is fearful and complete.

We have given ample extracts from our foreign files by the Washington, and all the details furnished by the telegraphic dispatches of the later news brought by the America, at Halifax; but we shall have to wait until the arrival of the mails before we can furnish the full particulars of the fall of Sebastopol the Great.

We can form an adequate idea of the tremendous operations which have resulted in the fall of this now world-renowned and immortal stronghold. If a victory is to be estimated by the magnitude of its cost, great should be the rejoicings of the Allies over the fall of the Malakoff. One effect of the news will be to relieve the public mind of an incubus which has weighed upon the thoughts of the whole world for the whole year past. In every part of the globe the fate of Sebastopol has been a subject of daily discussion; but the problem has at last been solved,—the mighty fortress is in ruins, and the world can dismiss the subject from its thoughts. Let the future conduct of the war be what it may, the attention of the nations of the earth can never again be centered upon a spot as it has been, with a strange fascination, upon that scene of carnage where the Tri-color of France, the Cross of St. George, and the Crescent of the Turk, now wave together in triumph. The culminating point of the great drama has been reached, and the final scene will be watched with abated interest.

State Politics—The Tickets.

The political parties are rapidly mustering their forces for the Fall canvass. We have already seven parties in the field, though only five tickets,—as the Whigs, Republicans and Know-Somethings have decided to vote together. The following are the tickets thus far selected:

WHIG, REP. AND K.-S.	KNOW-NOTHING.
Secy of State.....Preston King	J. T. Headley.
Comptroller.....Jas. M. Cook.	L. Burrows.
Treasurer.....A. S. Williams.	S. C. Chase.
Attorney General.Abijah Mann, Jr.	S. B. Cushing.
Canal Commr.....D. M. Russell.	S. S. Whelan.
State Engineer.....Geo. Geddes.	S. Conover.
Prison Inspector.J. W. Bailey.	W. A. Russell.
Judges Appeals.....{ S. E. Wood, Joseph Mutter,	W. W. Campbell, Geo. C. Comstock.

HARD-SHELL.	SOFT-SHELL.
Sec'y of State...Aaron Ward.	Ernest T. Hauk.
Comptroller.....Thos. B. Mitchell.	Lemuel Stetson.
Treasurer.....Jos. M. Lyons.	Ariel S. Thurston.
Attorney General.Josiah Sutherland	Samuel J. Tilden.
State Engineer...John D. Fay.	John S. Jervis.
Canal Commr...Frederick Follett.	Curtis Hawley.
Prison Inspector.Darius Clark.	Patrick H. Agan.
Judges Appeals.....{ Saml. L. Selden, John Willard.	Samuel L. Selden, Nicholas Hill, Jr.

LIBERTY PARTY, OR COLORED FUSIONISTS.
Secretary of State.....	Fred. Douglass.
Comptroller.....	Lewis Tappan.
Treasurer.....	Jas. C. Delong.
Attorney General.....	Jas. S. Pashan.
State Engineer.....	———
Canal Commissioner.....	W. White.
State Prison Inspector.....	Geo. W. Clark.
Judges of Appeals.....	{ Beriah Green. Wm. Goodell.

The Temperance Convention is still to be held. Whether an entirely new ticket will then be presented or not, remains to be seen. A voter must certainly be difficult to please if he cannot be suited with one or the other of these selections. The field for choice was never wider.

Fusion a Fact.

In spite of ex-Gov. HUNT's protest, the Whigs and Republicans have actually fused. They have adopted the same platform of principles,—nominated the same ticket, and resolved to pull together to secure the election of the one and the ascendancy of the other.

The movement will surprise nobody, except those who have become accustomed to regard political strategy as of necessity at war with common sense. It would seem to be the most natural thing in the world, that men who think alike should act alike:—that men holding the same opinions on a matter of engrossing interest, and paramount importance, should join together in the effort to give them weight in the public councils. This is precisely what has now been done. The great mass of the Whig party, and a very large portion of the Democratic party, regard the steady aggression of Slavery upon the rights of the Free States,—its unfaltering, resolute and audacious march towards complete ascendancy over the National Councils,—as infinitely the most important fact in the current history of the country, and as de*manding the earnest and united efforts of all*, who perceive and appreciate the peril, in resistance to its advances. They see, moreover, that all the issues that have hitherto divided them, are either permanently settled, or held for the time in abeyance. They see, therefore, not only no reason why they should not unite their forces in this movement, but very many reasons why any other course would be folly and fatal madness. And now, we presume, but those who oppose the principle which unites them, will question the policy of the union itself.

The platform they have adopted will commend itself to the public judgment by the moderation and firmness of its tone, the definite and clear precision as well as the justice of its principles, its judicious avoidance of all extraneous issues, and its freedom from dictation upon any subject. The ticket is made up of three Whigs and six Democrats. PRESTON KING, who heads it, has long been known as an able, consistent, honest Free-Soil Democrat,—and probably wields a greater influence with the Democrats of Northern New-York than any man since the death of SILAS WRIGHT.

We give, this morning, a very full and elaborate report of the action of both Conventions. It has interest, as the first chapter in the history of the most important political movement this State has witnessed for many years.

The Great Literary Festival.

The great Banquet given last night by the new Association of Publishers to the authors and booksellers, in one of the wings of the Crystal Palace, proved a brilliant success; the occasion was novel, and the experiment of bringing together the great producers of the raw material of our literature, and the manufacturers and circulating agents of books, showed that the traditional antagonism of the two classes, if it ever had any existence, has now completely passed away. Looking upon that brilliant hall last night we could not but think of the changes that have occurred in the Republic of Letters since the time when JOHNSON took his humble plate behind the screen in his publisher's parlor, and now. But, stranger than all, there at one table sat side by side two hearty looking gentlemen who were, in reality, the fathers of our Literature, our first Poet and our first Prose writer—IRVING and BRYANT—and there sat around them two hundred of the authors, male and female, of America, and four hundred thrifty publishers and booksellers. The reunion was a most delightful one, and the recurrence of a similar gathering will be looked forward to as one of the great events of the year.

Briggs and Matsell.

Setting aside all the foolieries of the BRIGGS and MATSELL affair, we cannot overlook the grave facts of the case as it now stands before the public. It is quite time that it was put aside, and the public attention no longer distracted by the reports of Mr. BRANDON's perseveringly but rather eccentric movements. Mr. MATSELL, as the Chief of Police, cannot afford to be made the subject of daily attacks on his personal character. The public service suffers in consequence, and he is bound to put an end to such disreputable proceedings. He stands accused before the public by an Alderman of the City, of having made a false statement in respect to the place of his nativity. A Commission has been granted for the purpose of discovering the truth, and he should be active in furnishing all the testimony required to free himself from the imputation upon his character.

The BRIGGS investigation has now ceased to be a joke, and it should be treated seriously by the person most interested in its proceedings. But Mr. MATSELL denies the authority of the Commission; and, instead of furnishing all the testimony in his power, interposes all the obstacles to their obtaining it. This is not well. It is quite the reverse. It is said that Mr. MATSELL has sisters living in the City who could at once put an end to the investigation as to his birth-place, and they should be produced. It appears that efforts to procure their testimony have been made in vain by the Investigating Committee, which does not tend to elevate the Chief in the public estimation.

The question of the birth-place of MATSELL is not, in itself, of the slightest importance to the public, but it is of the first importance to the public to know whether the head of the Police Department made a false statement in an official report concerning himself, and Mr. MATSELL should himself remove all doubts upon the subject. He has it in his power to put down BRIGGS and BRANDON, and end the seriously farcical proceedings of which he is himself the object, and he should do it at once. He is not in a position to trifle with his reputation, or to mislead the public.

The Indicted Aldermen.

A concerted attempt was made last night in the Board of Aldermen to force the indicted Aldermen to withdraw from the Board in advance of their trial. It was led by Alderman LORD, who offered a resolution requesting them to do so. The only reason he offered for this extraordinary proposition was, that respect for the Board should lead them to take this course. He was answered by the very obvious plea that these men had been put upon trial in the tribunals of justice:—and that it was neither just nor proper for the Board to prejudge the question of their guilt by such action as was proposed.

In reply Alderman LORD insisted that we were not bound to presume them innocent until proved guilty,—that, in fact, this could not be done without accusing the Grand Jury of perjury! For a lawyer, and a man of sound, common sense, this is certainly a novel and very extraordinary doctrine. Where the Alderman learned it, it would be difficult to conjecture.

It was charged, and tacitly confessed, in course of the debate, that this whole movement was projected by a secret meeting at the Mayor's Office.

☞ Councilman C. S. COOPER, of the Ninth Ward, has preferred a counter-complaint against PETER PALM, charging him with perjury, in having sworn that complainant asked a bribe of him. Mr. PALM is now confined to a bed of sickness, and is said with but feeble chances of recovery. He denies having made any such a charge, which he declares to be false.

☞ $4,500 has been raised by the Liquor Dealers of this City, in aid of the Norfolk and Portsmouth sufferers—and four Wards have not yet sent in their returns. It was so reported at a meeting of the Liquor Dealers, held at National Hall, Canal-street, last evening.

☞ The Know-Nothings of Massachusetts will meet in Convention at the Tremont Temple in Boston, on Wednesday, the 24 day of October next, for the nomination of State officers, &c.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. Boker's New Tragedy.

On Monday night we witnessed an act of one-minute daring. A dramatic author produced a stage fly. It was with mingled feelings of curiosity and fear, therefore, that we attended the Broadway Theatre, to witness the production of "Francesca da Rimini," a tragedy in five acts, by Mr. G. H. BOKER—already known on both sides of the Atlantic as the author of "Calaynos."

There is, probably, no story historically true which has had twenty representations as that of "Francesca da Rimini." First, in the gloomy epic of DANTE—as poem that is to verse, what music is to sculpture, the medium of grand and terrible subjects—and next, in the hell-less divine painting by ARY SCHEFFER. Most people have read the poem and seen the picture. But for those who have not done either, Mr. BOKER's tragedy, will, at least, supply us the sad story with sufficient accuracy.

That Mr. BOKER worked out the elements of DANTE's story to a successful end there can be no doubt. As in nearly all tragedies, the first and second act "hung," but the third set the people in motion, and by the time the curtain dropped on the fourth, the success of the piece was assured.

The part of Lanciotto is finely conceived and skillfully manipulated. His sensitive honor so even dividing himself to his deformities; his loyal fear of entrusting any woman into a marriage with a cripple; his longing for the sympathy and love of which his fate deprived him, and his career lost, he may not be worthy of it. His chivalric courage, his strong nature, his love for his beautiful brother, all these form fine opportunities for the light and shade of dramatic painting. Mr. BOKER has well worked out this strong and passionate character. Pepe, the jester, though reminding us somewhat of Triboulet in "Le Roi s'Amuse," is a fine conception, and affords the actor an excellent opportunity for creating a distinct and effective character. In the motives of the play Mr. BOKER differs somewhat from history, in he makes Francesca the seducer rather than the seduced, and differs also much from Mr. LEIGH HUNT in his poetic version of the same melancholy story, lending all our sympathies to the wronged husband, rather than to the guilty wife, a course which is moral, and is original because unusual in tragedy.

The play was cast as follows:

GUELPHS.

Malatesta	Mr. WHITING
Lanciotto, } his sons	Mr. E. L. DAVENPORT
Paolo, } his sons	Mr. LANMAN
Pepe, (the Jester)	Mr. G. SPENCER

GHIBELINES.

Guido da Polenta	Mr. CARROLL.
Francesca da Rimini	Mlle. PONTI.
Ella	Miss J. MANNERS.

Mr. DAVENPORT, despite a slight unfamiliarity with the text, enacted Lanciotto with much spirit and passion. His action is easy, and his delivery good. Doubtless if he had known the text better, his delivery would have been more correct. Mr. FRANK played in the less three acts of the tragedy admirably. At the commencement of the play he was a little too forced, but he grew timber and natural as the piece went on. His playing was entirely satisfactory. Of Mr. LANMAN we can only say that he did not look the young and beautiful Paolo to the life.

We regret to say that we do not think that Madame PONTI achieved a success in the part of Francesca. She is neither suited in voice nor appearance to such a part. Her delivery in impassioned parts is Rigoughty, and her voice is not sufficient enough to give due effect to speeches full of concentrated passion. She does not seem in tragedy to have that magnetic tone which is necessary to thrill an audience. She is, however, so excellent and versatile an artist that she can afford not to reckon this as a triumph. Miss MANNERS, in the pretty part of the confidante, Ella, mistook the character of her rôle altogether, and played it altogether badly.

The dresses, singular to relate, were very correct and in good taste; the scenery somewhat better than usual. The piece was entirely successful. Mr. DAVENPORT was called before the curtain three times during the performance, and at the conclusion of the tragedy, loud and prolonged calls for the author brought Mr. BOKER to the front of his box, when the usual bow was accorded. The piece was announced for repetition every night this week.

New Opera.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Mr. BRISTOW's original opera of "Rip Van Winkle," founded on Washington Irving's tale, and adapted for the lyric stage, was produced here last night to a crowded house. The great pressure on our columns prevents our speaking in detail of this work to-day. Of course we shall take another opportunity of doing so. At present we must content ourselves with announcing the complete success of the work. The music is light, pleasant, and rythmatic, largely pervaded by a martial spirit, and of a decidedly popular character in other respects. It was loudly applauded last night; most of the principal airs being encored. The leading rôles were entrusted to Miss LOUISA PYNE, Miss PYNE, Mr. HARRISON and Mr. STRETTON—the last-named gentleman making his first American appearance in the character of the hero, Rip Van Winkle.

The opera has been placed on the stage in a very superior manner. The local scenery is not only effective, but strictly correct. The opera will be repeated every night.

CITY POLITICS.

Meeting of the National Democracy of the Eleventh Ward—Repudiation of the Action of the General Committee.

At a meeting of the Democracy of the Eleventh Ward, held last evening at Union Hall, corner of Fourth-street and Avenue C, ROBERT EARL in the Chair,

WILLIAM GRUNDIE, Esq., made a lengthy speech. He reviewed the progress of the Democratic party, and expressed regret at the schisms that had been engendered to impair its vigor. He animadverted upon the action of the late State Convention. In conclusion he adverted to the action of the General Committee in having dispensed with primary meetings. He thought this an undue usurpation of prerogative. He advised that the people should not give up their right thus to make the primary elections to the different Conventions.

DANIEL E. SICKLES, Esq., next addressed the meeting. He considered the present movement one of the utmost importance to the Democratic party. The old Whig party—long their enemy—had, by the schisms engendered within itself, lost altogether its prestige position and power. Schisms had likewise permeated the Democratic ranks. The time had come when they were to take advantage of this splitting up into factions of the different parties. He alluded to the resolution having that design in view which he submitted at the Syracuse State Convention. That Convention rejected it, but it would not thus end. He should appeal to the people, and he believed they would sustain him. He commented at great length upon the means within their reach of uniting their strength. Know-Nothingism, Maine-Lawism and Abolitionism were censured in unsparing terms. He also advised that by all means they should repudiate the action of the General Committee of Stuyvesant Institute. He urged calls for primary elections and renewal of the old regime. It would be felt at Tammany Hall. The action of the General Committee was instigated by selfish considerations. It was a sacrifice of the present interests of the party to help a few political aspirants in the next presidential election at the Cincinnati Convention. Mr. SICKLES' speech was received with enthusiastic applause.

A letter was read from JAMES T. BRADY, expressing his regret at not being able to be present, with assurances of his hearty approval of the movement. Hon. EMANUEL B. HART said the state of his health did not admit of his making a speech, but he endorsed the views of the speakers who had addressed the meeting.

An address of the Hard Committee was read. It set forth the reasons inducing to the present movement, and their hope that it might meet with that general approval and indorsement that it merited. Appended to the address were a series of resolutions recounting their platform, and the course recommended for future adoption.

The address and resolutions were adopted unanimously, and the meeting adjourned.

☞ At a meeting of the Committee of the American Democracy, held at the Westchester House, on Tuesday evening, 25th inst., the declinations of PETER COOPER as candidate for Comptroller, WM. F. HAVEMEYER for Governor of Alms-house, JAS. T. BRADY for Judge of Supreme Court, and WALCOTT R. BEEBE for Justice of Marine Court, were taken up for consideration, and after a long discussion on the subject, the declinations were accepted, and the following persons were nominated to fill vacancies caused by the said declinations:

A. C. FLAGG for Comptroller, CHAS. FAIRCHILD for Governor of Alms-house, JAS. R. WHITING for Judge of Supreme Court.

State District Whig Judicial Convention.

The delegates of the Eighteenth and Twenty-first Wards, met last evening to elect a delegate at large, for the purpose of meeting those to nominate a Police Justice for the Sixth Judicial District. Seventy-seven ballots were taken, no choice made, and the meeting adjourned over until Monday.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE

By Telegraph to the New-York Daily Times.

THE REPUBLICANS.

MR. BLUNT IN TROUBLE.

WHO STOLE THE ADDRESS?

THE KNOW-SOMETHINGS AND THE SHOCTAWS.

THE STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

SYRACUSE, Thursday, Sept. 27.

The Presidents of the Joint Conventions appointed the following gentlemen to form the Republican State Committee:

E. D. Morgan, of New-York.
Simeon Draper, of New-York.
James E. Taylor, of New-York.
David D. Field, of New-York.
Joseph Blunt, of New-York.
James W. Nye, of New-York.
John L. Schoolcraft, of Albany.
Dendotus Wright, of Albany.
Joseph Davis, of Albany.
Thomas Hun, of Albany.
C. P. Williams, of Albany.
John McBride Davidson, of Albany.
George Gould, of Rensselaer.
Abram B. Olin, of Rensselaer.
Levi C. Turner, of Otsego.
Standish Barry, of Herkimer.
Levi Dimmick, of Broome.
Stephen C. Johnson, of Delaware.
Allen Munroe, of Onondaga.
Daniel F. Jones, of Onondaga.
Samuel P. Allen, of Monroe.
Silas M. Burrows, of Orleans.
E. G. Spaulding, of Erie.
Philip Dorsheimer, of Erie.
A. G. Rice, of Cattaraugus.
Charles O. Shepherd, of Wyoming.

The Convention of Know-Somethings and Chocktaws assembles immediately after the adjournment of the Republican Convention, and by a unanimous vote ratified the nominations presented, and the platform adopted by the Republicans.

It is understood that the Joint Committee on Platform adopted an Address in addition to the resolutions adopted. The reason assigned for the failure to present the Address, is that after its adoption by the Committee, it was given out to be copied. The gentleman entrusted with it for this purpose was engaged in the work, when a messenger came to him, and stated that Mr. BLUNT, the author of the Address, wished the manuscript. He took it as desired, and that is the last heard or heard of the argument demonstrating the whys and and wherefores of the Republican combination.

Doubtless some envious Hinker, fearing its logical conclusions and inevitable demonstrations, conceived the project of accomplishing its suppression by thus practicing upon the credulity of the copyist, and the world loses the eloquent argument, which I fear sinks the depths of some stagnant pool hereabouts. As these waters are pregnant with saline minerals, there is a hope that at some future day the paper will be exhumed in a high state of preservation; but that at the present time is not very consoling to the author, whose well-founded hopes of literary renown are thus prematurely nipped in the bud.

The Effect of the Fall of Sebastopol in Canada, &c., &c.

BUFFALO, Thursday, Sept. 27.

The people in all the towns in this vicinity are celebrating the receipt of the steamer's news with much enthusiasm.

At Toronto bonfires were lighted, guns fired, rockets set off, and the greatest excitement existed.

At Stratford the Court of Assizes was in session when the news was received. It was handed to the Judge on the Bench, and read by him amid loud cheers. Some time elapsed before business could be resumed. Flags were everywhere flying throughout the town.

At London there was a general excitation. Bells were rung, guns fired, and Scotsmen paraded the streets with bands of music.

Republican Mass Meeting in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Sept. 27.

A Republican Mass Meeting was held here this evening, and was addressed by GEORGE A. COFFEY, SAMUEL AARON, and Senator WILSON. The attendance was small. Resolutions were passed acknowledging the right of slave holders to maintain Slavery where existing, but denying the right to further extension; condemning the Supreme Court for refusing a writ of habeas corpus in the case of PASSMORE WILLIAMSON; declaring that it is a dangerous and anti-Republican proceeding; that a case may arise where an aggrieved person can hope for no redress, except from his oppressor; and that hesitation on the part of the State tribunal to enforce the undoubted rights of citizens for fear of a conflict with the Federal Officers, exhibits a servile and undemocratic attitude. The nomination of the State Convention was ratified.

The Foreign Legion Question.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Sept. 27.

The Jury in the case of HERTZ, charged with enlisting recruits for the Foreign Legion, has brought in a verdict of guilty.

Illness of the Wife of Chief Justice Taney.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Sept. 27.

The wife of Chief Justice TANEY is very ill at Old Point Comfort. Medical assistance has been summoned there from Baltimore.

The News of the Fall of Sebastopol in Boston—Massachusetts Politics.

BOSTON, Thursday, Sept. 27.

The news of the fall of Sebastopol created great excitement and surprise in this city. Many received the news with expressions of regret.

The Republican State Committee met to-day and elected HENRY S. WASHBURNE, Whig, Chairman of the Committee, and SETH WEBB, Jr., Free-Soil, Secretary.

The Journal of this city, which has heretofore rather favored fusion, comes out this afternoon for straight Whig nominations.

Trial of Willard Clark for the Murder of Richard Wright.

NEW HAVEN, Thursday, Sept. 27.

The case of WILLARD CLARK, on trial for the murder of RICHARD WRIGHT, who had married the young lady to whom CLARK was attached, was given to the Jury last evening. The defence was insanity, and at 2 o'clock the Jury returned a verdict of acquittal on that ground. When the verdict was announced, two rounds of applause were given by the large crowd present. Mr. CLARK will be confined in the Insane Retreat, by order of the Court.

Yacht Race.

ROCHESTER, Thursday, Sept. 27.

A race came off to-day, between the yachts Sam and Wild-Away, from Collins' Point, ten miles to windward and back, for a purse of $200. The Sam was an easy winner, beating the Wild-Away nearly 20 minutes.

Calendar of the Court of Appeals.

ALBANY, Thursday, Sept. 27.

EVENING SESSION—No. 6 concluded; No. 8 passed; No. 10 on argument.

Calendar for Friday, 28th—Nos. 17, 21, 23, 22, 24, 25, 27, 28, 29, 30.

Know-Something State Convention.

SYRACUSE, Thursday, Sept. 27.

The Know-Something State Convention reassembled at 9 o'clock to-day, and adopted the nominations made by the Fusionists.

☞ A Whig State Convention is to be held in Worcester, Mass., on Tuesday, the 24 day of October next, to nominate State officers, &c.

The Social Difficulties.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The British entered on CHARLES I., the French Louis XVI., and both revolutions failed. I don't think that the Americans, when they to have had a King of the Colonies during the war of independence, would have put him to death. The blood of the kings called murders revived the cause of loyalty and greatly contributed to his restoration. If BONAPARTE still reigns, it is because his other self, commanded less wonders than the "Provisory Government," of 1848, and his reign 14th should not under the French more liberal by better Constitution. I am ready to give my own life for the cause dear, but my conscience and my religion don't allow me to act dishonestly and politely, and I am opposed to judicial murders as well as to political assassinations. As to the danger to be executed by Mr. BARNARD, I insist my that if the resolution of 1848 was but a water-and-milk, "or a Fiat de rose," as the French say, the future republic might not to be a human butchery, as that of 1793 was. My friends and I are opposed to capital punishment, not by "chivalric delicacy," but by principle. If the day of the Rods prevents now a revolution in France, it can only be increased by taking of guillotine. I remain, yours sincerely,

BROOKLYN, Sept. 28, 1855. IVAN GOLOVIN.

Letter From Tampico.

From the N. O. Picayune, Sept. 20.

By the arrival of the schooner Red Fox, Capt. SIMS, from Tampico yesterday, we have papers thence to the 5th inst.

They are filled with reports of the proceedings there consequent on the flight of SANTA ANA, and the proclamation of a new government. The news of these events was received with considerable excitement, but Gen. CARANOVA, who enjoyed no influence to maintain quiet and order, left over 6 o'clock on the night of the 4th, when the fire bells were rung and the people assembled and upon the parade. Gen. CARANOVA, however, was soon on the spot, and succeeded in inducing the people to disperse, promising to summon them to meet on the following Sunday to decide on the course they would pursue. This was accordingly done: authorities and public men had unanimously adopted the plan of Ayutla, and acknowledged the new order of things. Gen. CARANOVA was made President, and a corresponding Cabinet was formed. Gen. CARANOVA issued the first proclamation to the new government. On the same day he issued an address to the officers in which he engaged as a soldier to support public order, and to recognise and pay obedience to whatever Government might be chosen by the nation. In this manner he ended an address to the troops, in which he says: "As soldiers of the nation we have to support and support the Government adopted by the nation. The Congress, neither deliberates nor decrees; the nation is to sustain order and the laws."

The troops accordingly proceeded to profess their adhesion to the order of things, as at the same time did the Ministry of Cobarrubias.

The Ministry of Cobarrubias was at once proclaimed, and then, without the slightest disorder, the State of Tamaulipas proceeded from its late objection to the rule of Santa Anna, and, by the way, from bearing his name Santa Ana, and, by the way, from bearing his name Santa Ana, and, by the way, from bearing his name Santa Ana

MEDICAL.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.—Mr. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds, a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,100 cases, and never failed, except in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession over 200 certificates of its virtue, all within 20 miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles may be warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of scrofulas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the eyes and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running ears.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the directions are followed.

Hundreds of certificates of a thousand bottles of this are the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. So sure as water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humor. I never offer it to the public until the cold weather; after a trial, it always speaks for itself. There is one humor about this herb that appears so me surprising—first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its virtues have been known until I discovered it to be, in a word, that it is a sovereign remedy.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great popularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1852, I sold it, and sold sixteen bottles per day. In April, 1854, I sold over a thousand bottles per day.

No change of diet was necessary—eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children twelve years, dessert spoonful; children from 5 to 8 years, tea spoonful. As the direction can be applicable to all constitutions take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

Mr. KENNEDY gives personal attendance in badcases of scrofula.

TRIBERMAN.—THE GREAT EUROPEAN DISCOVERY—Protected by Royal Letters Patent of England, and secured by the seals of the Ecole de Pharmacie de Paris, and the Imperial College of Medicine, Vienna.

TRIBERMAN No. 1.—Is the remedy for all chronic liberal debility, loss of virile power, premature decay, and all the distressing consequences arising from early abuse, the effects are efficacious in youth, manhood and old age; the virile powers would not become impaired, even in the decline of life, if the Triberman were universally adopted; all physical impediments vanish like magic before its influence, thus rendering its use invaluable to those entering the marriage state.

TRIBERMAN No. 2—Completely and entirely eradicates all traces of those disorders which cowards and rakes have so long been thought an antidote for, to the ruin of the health of a vast portion of the population.

TRIBERMAN No. 3—Is the great European remedy for that class of disorders which unfortunately the English Physician treats with mercury, to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.

TRIBERMAN No. 1, 2 and 3, are alike devvoid of taste or smell, and all nauseating qualities. They may lay on the toilet table without their use being detected.

Sold in the cases at $5 each, divided into separate doses, as administered by Valpeau, Lallemand, Roux, &c.

To be had wholesale and retail of Mr. H. G. HARROW No. 51 Greene-st., near Canal New-York, specially appointed by the Proprietor and Patentee, as Agent for the United States, and every other part of America. Immediately after the receipt of the money, will be forwarded the Triberman to any part of the world, properly secured and addressed according to the instructions of the writer.

DETAILED REPORT OF THE PROCEEDINGS.

FROM OUR OWN REPORTERS.

WHIG STATE CONVENTION.

SYRACUSE, Wednesday, Sept. 26, 1855.

The Whig State Convention assembled at Corinthian Hall, this morning, pursuant to the call of the State General Committee.

Shortly after 10 o'clock the Convention was called to order by Mr. E. D. MORGAN, of New-York, Chairman of the State General Committee, and was organized by the appointment of Hon. ALONZO S. UPHAM, of Genesee, as temporary President, and Messrs. S. F. HALL, of Albany, and O. L. WILSON, of Albany, as temporary Secretaries.

Mr. UPHAM, on taking the Chair, briefly returned thanks for the honor conferred upon him.

The names of the delegates elected were then called over.

Two delegates (Messrs. BAYES and ANDERSON,) presented credentials from the Fourth District of Oneida County.

Mr. CHURCHILL remarked, that it would be better that these Oneida County quarrels should be settled at our home conventions, and he would therefore move that this question be referred to the delegates from that County where both were uncontested.

The motion was agreed to, and after some discussion a similar case from Steuben County was referred to a Committee consisting of the two delegates from that County, whose seats are not contested, and Mr. ALLEN, of Onondaga.

During the call of the roll, Mr. LITTLEJOHN, Speaker of the House of Assembly, entered the hall and was greeted with loud cheers.

Messrs. FITCH and WILLARD presented credentials from the same District in Rensselaer County, which were referred to a Committee, consisting of Messrs. HOPKINS of Washington, GLEASE of Onondaga, and Van HORNE.

Mr. DAWSON, of New-York, moved that a Committee, to consist of one member from each Judicial District, to be selected by the delegates from such Judicial Division, be appointed to nominate permanent officers for the Convention.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Washington, moved as an amendment, that the Committee be appointed by the Chair.

Mr. DAWSON opposed the amendment. He said that he had offered his resolution with any partiality to the appointment of the officers of the Convention. That was of little importance, but he thought it was important that they should set the example of appointing committees by the mass of the Convention, and not in a blind and confused manner. He hoped that the amendment would not adopt candidates and prevent delegates from themselves, and that the gentleman who spoke to be heard with reference to the proceedings of this Convention and the proceedings that are to take place at Syracuse on this occasion. He thought the delegates from the different Judicial Districts would be able to meet and present such a committee as would meet with hearty approval.

Mr HOPKINS said that he had no feeling about the matter. He had offered the amendment because he thought that was the customary mode of appointing committees, and with a view of saving time. As however, it seemed to create some feeling, he would withdraw it.

Mr. CHURCHILL immediately renewed the amendment. He did not want to negative eight Conventions; he thought one was quite enough.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MORRIS H. GRINNELL, of New-York, moved further to amend so as to make the Committee consist of two members from each Judicial District instead of one.

This amendment was also adopted, and the motion as amended was then agreed to.

The Chairman appointed the following as the Committee on Permanent Organization:

1. Isaac V. Fowler, Morris H. Grinnell.
2. Wm. Travis and James Humphrey.
3. Francis Bond and Joshua Fry.
4. Cornelius Schoonmaker and Gilman Foote.
5. Harvey Doolittle and W. E. Sherman.
6. F. H. McDowell and William Comstock.
7. Calvin Pease and D. D. Scott.
8. William Keep and D. W. Douglass.

The Convention then took a recess till 1 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Upon the reassembling of the Convention at 1 o'clock, Mr. HOPKINS, from the Committee appointed on Credentials in the contested case at Troy, reported that the Committee had heard the testimony of both parties, and had come to the conclusion that ROBERT A. BOOTH was the regularly elected delegate to the Convention.

The report was accepted, and Mr. FIGGS was admitted to a seat.

The Committees appointed on the contested seats from the Third District of Steuben County, and from Oneida County, reported severally in favor of GEO. A. SWITT and Mr. BAYES.

The reports were unanimously received, and those gentlemen were admitted to seats in the Convention.

Mr. DAWSON, of New-York, from the Committee on Permanent Organization, then reported the following for permanent officers of the Convention:

President—JOHN A. KING, of Queens.

	Vice Presidents.
Moses H. Grinnell, N. Y.	W. H. Sherman, Oneida.
A. S. Murray, Orange.	W. E. Lansing, Madison.
Peter Crispell, Ulster.	S. W. Smith, Livingston.
J. C. Hoffman, Saratoga.	W. I. Sessions, Chautauqua.
	Secretaries.
W. H. Chubbuck, Madison.	J. H. Kimberley, Genesee.
E. L. Wilson, Albany.

The report was unanimously accepted, and the Hon. JOHN A. KING, President elect, was conducted to the Chair by Messrs. ALLEN MORRIS, of Onondaga, and DAWSON, of Washington—the Committee appointed for that purpose—amidst vehement applause.

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

The PRESIDENT then addressed the Convention as follows: Gentlemen of the Convention, I hardly know in what terms to express to you my sense of the honor which you have conferred upon me. I am an old soldier in the Whig ranks. [Loud cheers.] I have endeavored to be true to the Whig principles—(cheers)—to do my duty whenever and wherever my fellow countrymen have thought proper to trust me, and I am now, late in life, honored with your selection as presiding officer of this body—a body of intelligent and thinking men—of men who reflect, compare and decide intelligently, and with the best view to the interests of this Republic. I am, therefore, truly honored by being selected as your presiding officer on this occasion, and for it, I return you my best and most grateful acknowledgment. [Cheers.] We are assembled here to perform the duty which devolves, from time to time, upon the great parties of this State, of making nominations for its State Officers. I trust that we shall perform that duty with intelligence and liberality, and with a proper sense of the condition of things which exists in the country at this time. [Cheers.] Having discharged that duty, we shall have yet another great duty to perform, and that is to express the sentiments of this great free State—this mighty commonwealth, intelligent and full of enterprise—upon the great question which the National Convention have thought proper to present to the people of the United States. [Cheers.] In connection with the ordinary duties of the Whig Convention, we have to pronounce upon those measures which we think wrong, fatal, and which the free people, not only of this but of every land where freedom exists, denounce as a great and unmitigated wrong. [Loud cheering.] The legislature of Congress has forced this question upon us. They have been parties to the violation of a solemn compact of the people of the United States—a compact made in 1820, and which, though forced upon the free people of this land, they had honorably maintained on their side. Thus it stood. We have done what we could to vindicate the rights of that compact. I was one of those at that day who did not think it best to have a compact upon that question, but who believed that then and there, upon the admission of Missouri, was the time to make this issue. [Cheers.] He whose blood I inherit accepted that position. Standing in the national councils, under the resolutions of the great State, in the performance of a great duty, upon that occasion, New-York by her representatives, I like, which stood upon the mantle-piece revolved and unexpected at this moment declared that it was the duty of Congress, as they had the right, to refuse the admission of Missouri into the Union unless she came as a Free State! [Cheers.] A compromise was, however, the result, and that compromise we have kept our part faithfully maintained. And now we are solemnly called upon, as the representatives of a large portion of the intelligent and thinking men of this great State, to say what it is right and proper for the State to do in reference to this great question. We are to speak not only for ourselves, now, when the occasion demands it, but we are to speak for those who are to come after us; we are to put the seal of New-York upon the sentiment which agitates and has controlled the elections in all the Free States of this Union upon the question whether our independence was achieved and the Constitution established for Liberty or Slavery. (Loud and long-continued cheering.) And we of New-York are the men to do it. We are the people who have the greatest stake in the honor and character of this great Nation. It was by virtue of the Constitution that we became what we are—one of the greatest States of this confederacy. We are a liberty-loving people. We abide by the privileges of the Constitution and by its compromises. We owe fealty to freedom and to the United Area, and fealty to the Constitution and its compromises after words. So far I go and no further; and it is our duty on this occasion to say out and out, like freemen, what we think, what we would have, and how long we will stand by it. We have now and then among freemen those who forget their duty, who are oblivious of the obligations which rest upon them, and who sometimes stray from the path which we should desire them to walk in. These are the men who have brought this issue upon us. If the freemen of the free States had asserted for themselves and through their representatives in Congress those doctrines which belong to freedom, we should not now have been called upon to express our sentiments upon the outrage that has been committed by the violation of a time-honored compromise, and upon those scenes of violence and outrage in Kansas which have been the natural result of it. [Cheers.]

I am not a man to invite you to do anything rash or wrong, or touch violent language. I am too old for that, and I think too wise. It is not necessary. We who feel and enjoy the blessings of liberty can make some allowance for those in this great confederacy who are not so well off as we are, but we owe it to ourselves quietly, calmly but firmly to assert the right of the free people of this nation to a proper representation of their opinions and sentiments in the national Councils and in the General Government. [Cheers.] But it has not been so in the past. We have been deprived of our proper weight as the Committee of Congress and in the General Government; we have had but a small share of our birthright and of the inheritance whichour forefathers fought for. [Cheers.] But we must now quietly but firmly take our stand; we must put our foot down and say "Thus far shalt thou go and no further." (Cheers.) What is left belongs to Freedom. When you have got, maintain. We will not touch it. But don't ask to extend it. Do not seek to take that which has been solemnly consecrated to Freedom and dedicate it with Slavery. You have got a large and fertile portion of this great country. You have now one half of one branch of the Councils of the Nation. Be content with that, but what remains to Liberty—it belongs to Freedom, and we should be false to the true sense of New-York if we did not declare that so long as New-York has a vote to give we will maintain that Liberty shall prevail on what remains of the territory of the Union, that no more Slave States shall come into the confederacy and that Slavery shall have its limits where they now stand. (Loud cheers.) Every man who hears me must agree to the sentiment that Slavery is a curse; that it is a blot upon the fair escutcheon of the noblest Republic in the world, that all good men regret its existence, and that all good men desire, if practicable, its extinction.

That cannot, perhaps, be accomplished. Perhaps the attempt to do it would be wrong, but we have the power to limit the institution to where it exists, and that is the doctrine which I desire should be established. In order to establish this great, this noble, this beneficent object, we must not be content with our own strength, but we must ask the aid and cooperation of all those who agree with us. This is the great and overwhelming issue before the people of the United States. It appeals directly to every man in this Convention. He is a conservator of all that belongs to Liberty. Our commerce, our manufactures, our agriculture, our schools and colleges, and all that makes Liberty worth having, appeal to each and all of you to stand fast upon this question, and not to swerve from your duty. If you act as you should, you will unite with all who are right upon this great issue to rescue the country and the Constitution from any further encroachments of Slavery. (Cheers.) Upon other questions I have nothing to say. I represent the men who honestly hold opinions, no matter how adverse to my own. I find no fault with them, and wage no war against them. It is not now the time, I think, to mingle any other questions with this great issue. Let that one stand out in all its length and breadth. Let it stand out as the great pillar to guide us and light us on our way, and let every true disciple come up and stand by his precept it. Let other issues stand on their own merits. Let each man, in his own vocation, do what he thinks right in relation to them. But let the hone and sinew of New-York, its whole intelligence and power, come in and act this great question. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, I have but little more to say to you. But for this question I should not have been here in this Convention. I did not want to come. I thought I was not the man for the occasion. I thought a younger and abler man might have been selected, although not a truer one. But as I am here I will go through with it. You have honored me, and I will stand by you. You have confidence in me, and from this day forth while life lasts I will stand by you and by those great principles which I have inherited, and which my fathers have bequeathed to me. Humble as I am, I am proud to have been the recipient of such noble principles, and so far as I can I would communicate them to every man in the State of New-York. Let your course be right, and the country will stand by it. [Loud applause.]

Mr. MORRIS H. GRINNELL, of New-York, called for three cheers, which were given right heartily with odd cheer more.

REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE.

The PRESIDENT then announced that a Committee was present from the Republican Convention who were desirous to make a communication to this Convention.

On motion, leave was given to the Committee (which consisted of Mr. PARKE GODWIN and Mr SHERWOOD, of New-York,) to make their communication.

Mr. GODWIN, of the Republican Convention, then came forward and said:

Mr. PRESIDENT: The Republican Convention who are now assembled in this city, conceiving that there might be sufficient coincidence of opinion between themselves and this body to enable them to form either a body of principle, or to select candidates for office, have appointed a Committee of conference to meet a similar Committee from this body if it should concur in the action. Mr. SHERWOOD, of New-York, and myself have been appointed as a sub-Committee, to announce that fact to you and submit it to your action.

On motion, the Chair was authorized to appoint a committee of eight, one from each Judicial District, to meet the Committee on the part of the Republican Convention.

COMMITTEE OF CONSULTATION.

The President thereupon appointed the following gentlemen to constitute said Committee:

Dist.		Dist.
1.	Messrs Grinnell and Herrick.	5.	Messrs. Littlejohn and J. A. Sherman.
2.	Messrs. Murray and Jennings.	6.	Messrs. Churchill and Juliand.
3.	Messrs. Crispell and Schoolcraft.	7.	Messrs. Hall and Dickeason.
4.	Messrs. Foote and Upham.	8.	Messrs. Upham and Spaulding.

The Committee then retired to meet the Committee on the part of the Republican Convention, and the Convention took a recess until 3 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

When the Convention was again called to order, Mr. LITTLEJOHN, of Oswego, made the following

REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE.

"The Committee of Conference on the part of this Convention have met the Committee of 16 on the part of the Republican Convention, and it was there unanimously agreed that a plan should be submitted as follows: That each Convention should appoint a Committee of 16, two from each Judicial District, upon resolutions, and another of 32, one from each Senatorial District, upon nominations. This is the plan submitted by the Joint Conference Committee of the two bodies."

The report, which was received with loud cheers, was unanimously adopted.

APPOINTMENT OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Washington, moved that the President be authorized to appoint the two Committees.

Mr. RICE, of Cattaraugus, moved as an amendment, that the Committees be severally appointed by the Delegates from the respective Judicial and Senatorial Districts.

Mr. BROWN, of Lewis, moved to amend the amendment so as to provide that the Committee on Resolutions should be appointed by the Chair, and that the Committee on Nominations should be appointed by the Delegates from the several Senatorial Districts.

Mr. HOPKINS accepted the latter proposition in lieu of his own amendment.

After a brief discussion as to the best mode of appointing the Committees, the amendment was rejected, and Mr. HOPKINS' motion was agreed to amidst considerable applause.

The PRESIDENT thereupon appointed the following Committees:

COMMITTEE ON NOMINATIONS.

Dist.		Dist.
1.	N. D. Thayer.	17.	H. M. Beckley.
2.	Jas. Humphreys.	18.	W. M. Comstock.
3.	Jas. B. Taylor.	19.	J. A. Sherman.
4.	E. W. Morgan.	20.	A. Z. McCarthy.
5.	John J. Lilcock.	21.	C. P. Granger.
6.	Moses H. Grinnell.	22.	Alias Monroe.
7.	John S. Wendle.	23.	P. H. McGraw.
8.	Albert Van Klack.	24.	L. R. Ross.
9.	A. S. Murray.	25.	D. D. Scott.
10.	Erastus Cook.	26.	A. B. Dickinson.
11.	John L. Schoolcraft.	27.	S. P. Allen.
12.	P. A. Flood.	28.	R. S. Hill.
13.	Edward Dodd.	29.	Chas. Cole.
14.	J. C. Clark.	30.	Morris Gates.
15.	B. Usher.	31.	Christian Metz.
16.	Harvey Doolittle.	32.	A. S. Rice.

COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

Dist.		Dist.
1.	E. D. Morgan and Chas. S. Tappan.
2.	J. H. Jennings and A. Holden.
3.	A. M. Vedder and J. M. Ramsay.
4.	C. Schuyler and S. Foot.
5.	D. W. C. Littlejohn and E. A. Brown.
6.	J. A. Northrup and A. Churchill.
7.	E. F. Hall and W. Clark.
8.	E. G. Spaulding and W. E. Keep.

On motion of Mr. FOOT, of St. Lawrence, a Committee of two, consisting of Messrs. FOOT and LITTLEJOHN, was appointed to wait upon the Republican Convention and inform them of the appointment of the Committees by this body, in accordance with the plan proposed by the Conference Committee.

LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

On motion of Mr. MONROE, of Onondaga, the following letter from the Secretary of State was then read to the Convention:

SYRACUSE, Sept. 26, 1855.

To the Chairman of the Whig State Convention:

SIR: Many of my personal and political friends have been pleased to suggest my renomination to the office which I now occupy. I am not insensible to their kindness, nor to the honors of the position which has been conferred upon me through their partiality, and I shall ever feel most grateful for all their manifestations of confidence and regard.

But realizing most deeply, as I do, the paramount importance of the proper decision by the people of this State, of the great issues about to be presented for their consideration, and being most anxious to relieve the Convention from all embarrassment in what relates personally to myself, I have determined, with sentiments of the highest respect for the Convention, and with feelings of the warmest interest for the success of the cause in which they are engaged, to withdraw my name from the pending canvass, and to leave the Convention at full liberty to make such choice of a candidate to succeed me as shall, under existing circumstances, seem best adapted to secure the great objects for which it is assembled.

I remain, with sentiments of the highest respect, your obedient servant, E. W. LEAVENWORTH.

(Cheers.)

DECLINATION OF MR. SPAULDING.

Mr. E. G. SPAULDING, the State Treasurer, then rose and said: I take this occasion to express my concurrence in the sentiments expressed in the letter which has just been read from the Secretary of State. I am gratified at the unanimity which prevails in this Convention upon the great and paramount question which agitates the public mind. I feel deeply the importance of carrying forward this great movement to a successful termination, and concurring in the sentiments expressed by the Secretary of State, I now place myself in the position he has done before this Convention. (Loud cheers.)

A MR. MILES AND SEVERAL OTHERS PROTEST AGAINST FUSION.

Mr. H. C. MILES of New-York, said that as the Convention seemed disposed to fuse with Conventions other than Whig, he asked, in justice to his constituents, to be allowed to present a protest, on behalf of himself and others.

A DELEGATE—I move that it be referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

Mr. MILES—The gentleman certainly cannot deprive me of the right to have it read.

Cries of "Read it."

One of the Secretaries, then, amid much laughter, read the following document:

"We, the undersigned members of a Whig State Convention, elected by our constituents to make Whig nominations in a Whig State Convention, and to act as Whigs only in a Whig State Convention, hereby protest against the abandonment or destruction of the Whig party, or its fusion with any Abolition party.

THE WM. HARRISON and WEBSTER Whigs of the State have refused all coalition or action with Abolitionists for the last fifteen years, and we protest against a coalition with them now, as we have assembled to nominate a Whig ticket of well-known Whigs.

In our belief, no more sectional party can long exist in this country, or ought to exist, and we protest, therefore, against changing the Whig party of this State into, or transferring it over to, any party which is not, nor cannot from its character be a National Party. But as a majority assembled in this Convention seem desirous for an abandonment rather than for the well-being of the Whig party, we respectfully decline any farther participation in the proceedings of this body.

HENRY C. MILES,
Delegate from the Fifteenth Assembly District.
BENEDICT LEWIS, Jr.,
Delegate from the Twelfth Assembly District.
CHAS. S. TAPPAN,
Delegate from the Fourth Assembly District.
WM. H. SPARKS,
Delegate from the Third Assembly District.
M. C. FORDHAM,
Delegate from the First Assembly District."

THE EFFECT PRODUCED.

Mr. SESSIONS—As it is a very important communication, I move that it be referred to the Committee having charge of Governor Hunt's letter. (Roars of laughter.)

Mr. MORRIS H. GRINNELL, of New-York, said: I second that motion with a great deal of pleasure. I do it, Sir, as a citizen of New-York, for I hold that while these gentlemen were nominated to come here to a Whig Convention, yet before their protest should have been presented here, they should, at least, have had the magnanimity to wait and see what kind of nominations would be made. (Cheers.) But, gentlemen, time is precious, it is rolling on with us. Amen! and let them go. [Roars of laughter and shouts of bravo.] I move that the name of Mr. TAPPAN, who is one of the Committee of Sixteen, be stricken from the list, because he is no longer a member of this Convention. Mr. TAPPAN was placed upon the Committee of Sixteen, and, if I have heard aright just now, he has put his name to a paper to be presented here, protesting against the action of the Convention. Why did he not act the manly part, and withdraw from the Convention quietly, saying, "Gentlemen, take your own course!" I move that his name be stricken from the Committee, and that some man be substituted for him who is true to the principles of this Convention. (Loud cheers and cries of "Second the motion.")

Mr. CHARLES S. TAPPAN, of New-York, explained that he was not aware that he had been placed upon the Committee, or he should at once have declined to act. He had no desire to get placed on a Committee in a Convention, of the objects of which he disapproved.

The question was then taken on Mr. GRINNELL'S motion, and it was carried unanimously. The President then substituted the name of Mr. GRINNELL for Mr. TAPPAN on the Committee on Resolutions.

REPORT OF THE CONFERENCE COMMITTEE.

The Committee of two appointed to wait on the Republican Convention here returned to the hall and reported that they had performed that duty, and that meetings of the two Committees would be held almost immediately.

A similar Committee on the part of the Republican Convention, consisting of J. BLUNT and PRESTON KING, shortly afterwards appeared and informed the Convention that the Republican Convention had appointed the two Committees agreed upon by the Conference Committee.

The Convention then, at 4½ o'clock, took a recess until 7 o'clock this evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The report of the proceedings of the Evening Session, which were of little importance, was given yesterday. The Committees appointed announced that they could not complete their business until morning, and the Convention adjourned until 9 o'clock A. M. to-morrow.

SECOND DAY—THURSDAY,

BY MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH.

The Platform and State Ticket.

SYRACUSE, Thursday, Sept. 27—11 A. M.

The Whig Convention assembled at 9 o'clock this morning.

General BURROUGHS this morning sent the Nominating Committee a letter declining to be a candidate for Canal Commissioner. The Committee accepted the withdrawal, and nominated DANIEL H. BUSSELL to fill the vacancy.

MOSES H. GRINNELL, from the Committee on Resolutions, presented the following report:

The Committee appointed to meet a similar body appointed on behalf of the Republican Convention, report that they have met the Committee above named, and after a full comparison of opinions, in which an earnest desire was manifested by all to recognize the claims of every section of the State, and to harmonize all interests represented in the Convention, and more especially to place before their fellow-citizens a ticket which would meet their cordial approval and support, the said Committees have, with entire unanimity, agreed upon the following nominations,

For Secretary of State.....PRESTON KING.
For Comptroller.....ALEX. M. COOK.
For Treasurer.....ABEL E. WILLIAMS.
For Attorney-General.....ANDREW MANN, Jr.
For Canal Commissioner.....DANIEL H. BUSSELL.
For State Engineer.....GEO. GUDDES.
For Inspector State Prisons.....J. WESLEY SALLEY.
Judge of Appeals (long term).....BRADFORD R. WOOD.
Judge of Appeals (short term).....JOSEPH MULLER.

On motion the report was unanimously accepted and its adoption received with vociferous cheering.

E. F. HALL opposed the nomination of JAMES M COOK. He was in favor of an entire set of new men.

A. B. DICKINSON and D. C. LITTLEJOHN advocated the adoption of the ticket as reported.

Upon a vote being taken the ticket was unanimously adopted.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

E. D. MORGAN, from the Committee on Resolutions, reported the following as nearly the unanimous expression of the Joint Committee:

Resolved, That the Federal Government being one of defined and limited powers, among which the power to enslave human beings is not found, we must earnestly deny its right to establish, uphold or tolerate Slavery in any portion of the public domain, or to connive at its establishment in the Federal Territory by any means whatsoever.

Resolved, That while there can be no legal Slavery in the Territories of our Union, there can be no Slave States legally formed out of such Territories, and we declare ourselves unalterably opposed to the formation there of any more Slave States, and in favor of an express prohibition by Congress of Slavery in all territory of the Union.

Resolved, That the repudiation in the interest and by the vote of the Slave power of so much of the Missouri compact as insures to the advantage of Freedom, after it had yielded all possible advantages to Slavery, admonishes us of the insufficiency of any compact to restrain that spirit of aggression and rapacity inherent in a system which robs man of his liberty, earth of its fertility, and labor of its rightful reward.

Resolved, That the Federal Administration by its uniform policy, but especially by the removal of Governor REPPIN and the appointment in his stead of one who recognizes the object of the Missouri invaders as a true legislature for Kansas, and demands that the tyrannical usurpation of that body shall be obeyed, as the law of that Territory, fully identifies itself with the effort to plant Slavery thereon, and renders impossible the further support of the Executive by men who desire that Kansas shall now be a free Territory and in due time a Free State.

Resolved, That those citizens of Free States who have migrated to Kansas with the purpose of making her Free, have in so doing, vindicated the law and asserted its rights; that their peaceful yet resolute bearing in view of the outrages to which they have been subjected by armed bands, predicated upon their from Missouri, commands them to our warmest admiration, and we pledge them our zealous and active support, that these invaders shall be defeated, and their rights fully secured.

Resolved, That the outrages committed in a sister State, under color of judicial authority, on a citizen guilty of no crime but humanity and truth, admonishes us that Slavery is everywhere at war with justice and intent on bending all things to its will; therefore we exhort our citizens, as they value their own rights and liberties, not to interfere with judicial or other times, but uphold and sympathize with the oppressors of PLATTSMUTH WILLEARSES.

Resolved, That secret political organizations are inconsistent with the liberal principles of our free government, and anti-republican in their character; and that we repudiate and condemn the proscriptive and anti-republican doctrines of the order of Know-Nothings and all their secret constitutions, oaths, rituals and organizations.

Resolved, that while the policy of Canal enlargement is settled by the change of the State Constitution, authorizing an increase of the State Debt, to the amount of nine millions of dollars for that purpose, the Republican party will insist upon the honest and faithful application of those funds to the purpose for which they are appropriated; that in the management of the State Finances, we will require a rigid system of accountability, and the strictest economy in all expenditures from the public Treasury.

Resolved, That the policy of repairing our completed public works in sections, by contract, to be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder, enlisting, as it does, a strong pecuniary interest in preventing breaks, or stopping them at the outset, commends itself to our judgment as conducive alike to economy in expenditure and rapidity of navigation, and we commend its adoption in the management of our canals.

Resolved, That in forming a new political organization, we adopt and reaffirm, as our own, the principles set forth, as those of the Republicans of 1800 in the inaugural of THOMAS JEFFERSON, as follows: "Equal and exact justice to all men—the support of the State Government in all their rights, as the most competent administrators for our domestic concerns, and the surest bulwark against anti-Republican tendencies; the preservation of the General Government in its whole constitutional vigor, a jealous care of the right of election by the people; a mild and safe corrective of abuses which are lopped by the axe of reformation where peaceable remedies are unprovided; absolute acquiescence in the decisions of the majority—the vital principle of Republics from which there is no appeal but to force the vital principle and immediate parent of despotism; economy in the public expenditures that labor may be lightly burdened, the honest payment of our debts and sacred preservation of the public faith, encouragement of agriculture and of commerce as the handmaid, the diffusion of information and arraignment of all abuses at the bar of public opinion, freedom of religion, freedom of the press, and freedom of person under the protection of the Habeas corpus, and trial by juries impartially selected. These principles form the bright constellation which has gone before us and guided our steps through an age of revolution and reformation—the wisdom of our sages and the blood of our heroes have been devoted to their maintenance—they shall be the creed of our political faith—the text of civic instruction—the touchstone by which to try the services of those we trust; and should we wander from them in moments of error or alarm, let us hasten to retrace our steps and to regain the road which alone leads to peace, liberty and safety."

The resolutions were adopted unanimously.

E. G. SPAULDING, Esq., moved the appointment of a Committee to communicate to the Republican Convention that the joint resolutions and nominations had been agreed to, and to make arrangements to meet in Joint Convention for ratification. The Chair named as such Committee, Messrs. Spaulding, Allen, Morgan, Lansing, Fiero, Schoolcraft, Hopkins, Rice, Sherman, and Littlejohn.

The Whig Convention thereupon adjourned to meet the Republicans in Whiting Hall.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

SYRACUSE, Wednesday, Sept. 26, 1855.

The delegates to the Republican State Convention met to-day in Whiting Hall at 10 A. M. The attendance was large. It included many gentlemen whose political reputation has been extensive, and whose public standing and personal character are as high as their integrity and talent are unquestioned.

Judge CULVER suggested that as a list of 256 delegates had to be made out, the gentlemen present as such should hand up their names.

A delegate submitted that the better way would be to call the counties.

Judge C. did not agree with that, because no formal proceeding should be instituted until after some organization had been made. He then moved that Mr. GILL, editor of the Dutchess County Examiner, be appointed temporary Secretary.

The motion was put and carried unanimously.

Subsequently the counties were called over, and the respective delegations handed in the names of their members to the Secretary.

The names of the delegates were then read over, and the list corrected.

NOMINATION OF A PRESIDENT.

Mr. JOSEPH BLUNT rose and said he would move, for the purpose of presiding over this Convention, the name of Hon. REUBEN E. FENTON, from Chautauqua—a member of Congress who had nobly signalized his love of freedom by breaking off from that band of his own party who sought to sacrifice the interests of the North to the spirit of Slave aggression.

The question on Mr. FENTON's appointment was put to the meeting, and carried unanimously in the affirmative.

PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

Mr. FENTON took his seat on the platform amid loud applause. He said:

GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION: You have assembled together in a great and important crisis affecting the interests of the country. Questions are involved in the issues which are to be presented, which strike at the foundation of our Republican Government—questions momentous in their importance—no less important than whether this Government shall be made the instrument of the propagation of human slavery, or whether it shall be as it was designed to be by the framers, the fathers of our Government, the noblest bulwark of human freedom. [Applause.] In view, then, of the momentousness of these issues, and the importance of the cause which, as freemen, we wish to advance, I feel honored in being selected as the officer to preside over your deliberations. We have assembled, however, not only to deliberate, but to act. Other conventions have also recently assembled. I allude to the Democratic Conventions and to the so-called Know-Nothing Conventions. They have not acted in conformity with the sympathies and judgment of the people. The principles of their leaders are like the streams which rise in the mountains of the North, and flow to the vales of the South. It is for us to act on this occasion in conformity with the fixed sentiments of the people, and in conformity to the principles laid down by the fathers of our Republic. At present, from the bay of New-York to the hills of Chautauqua, you will find the people ready to roll back the tide of Slavery, and stay the aggressive spirit of Southern Slaveholders. [Applause.]

VICE-PRESIDENTS AND SECRETARIES.

Mr. BLUNT said he had been requested to present the names of eight Vice-Presidents and two Secretaries for election in order to complete the organization. The gentlemen whose names are under were unanimously elected:

District.		District.
1.	W. Curtis Noyes.	5.	Daniel Wardwell.
2.	Matthew Thompson.	6.	O. W. Pratt, of Steuben.
3.	Dandeno Wright.	7.	E. W. Hopkins.
4.	James T. Masters.	8.	Timothy Dorsheimer.

SECRETARIES.

Thomas S. Barry, Jacob J. Werner.

PROGRAM TO THE EAST.

Mr. BLUNT again came forward and said: Another Convention has assembled at this time in this city, and there is some reasonable expectation formed that such conference as we may have will be presenting the Niagara that shall truly represent the sentiment of the people of New-York on the great questions now agitating the public mind; and that in advance of such action as shall indicate to the people that our object is the maintenance and execution of the great principle of human freedom, there is, I say, a strong probability that such conclusion as we may come to will meet the approbation of the other Convention now assembled in this city. [Applause.] In view, Sir, of treating that body with proper respect, I now move that a Committee of two from each Judicial District be appointed for the purpose of conferring with such Committee as that body may think fit to select on the subject of our deliberations. [Applause.]

The question was put and unanimously carried.

COMMITTEE TO FUSE.

It was further moved that the Committee be appointed by the Chair. Carried.

The subjoined Committee was appointed:—

Dist.		Dist.
1.	Joseph Blunt, Luman Sherwood.	5.	Hugh McAllister, Nathan Soule.
2.	Parke Godwin, John Jay.	6.	Benj. F. Tracy, F. Sahcock.
3.	Joseph Ferris, C. B. Williams.	7.	Wilson Miller, James P. Fogg.
4.	W. B. Harris, James Rivington.	8.	Austin Smith, Peter P. Murphy.

Mr BLUNT said the Committee were desirous that the Committee on Conference should have an interview with the Committee appointed by the Whig Convention, and to give them an opportunity of doing so he would move an adjournment until 3 o'clock.

Hon. HORACE GREELEY said he would like to know what power was possessed by that Committee. He would move that they have power to report a platform of principles if they deemed such a course expedient.

Some delegate made a suggestion in an under tone, and

Mr GREELEY withdrew his motion.

The CHAIRMAN then put the motion for adjournment, and it was carried without dissent.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention met again at 3 o'clock. The attendance was still larger than at the previous sitting. After the lapse of a few minutes the Chairman called the Convention to order.

On motion of a Delegate Messrs. JOHN B. GALE, of Rensselaer, and S. H. MARTINDALE, of Monroe, were appointed additional Secretaries.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

Mr. BLUNT reported on behalf of the Committee appointed to confer with the gentlemen who had been chosen to meet them by the Whig Convention. He said the Committee of sixteen appointed on the part of their body, to consult with their friends of the other Convention, after a satisfactory interview giving plain indications of their mutual willingness to act in concert, would recommend that both Committees be allowed to retire to their respective Conventions and ask that similar Committees be appointed to report a platform of such a character as would be agreeable to their several Conventions. They also recommended that a Committee of thirty-two be appointed to report the names of such candidates as might be supposed acceptable to both bodies.

The adoption of the report was moved, seconded and carried without dissent.

MR. OWEN WISHES TO DO HIS OWN VOTING.

The CHAIRMAN was about to put the recommendations to the Convention for adoption, when

Mr. VOLNEY OWEN, of Herkimer, rose and said, he did not wish to the appointment of a Committee to recommend candidates to the Convention. He wished to nominate and vote for the candidates himself. [Applause.] He would support anybody who might be nominated, whether on recommendation of a Committee or not, and who should be adopted by a majority of the Convention; but it would be much more satisfactory, he thought, to let every man vote for his own candidate. The people in Herkimer only asked the little office of State Prison Inspector, and would even give up that if such a ticket was chosen as would be satisfactory to the entire Democratic—[laughter]—the most to the entire Republican party. He had heard that it was said to a leading Republican the other day by another gentleman, a Whig, that he had often been cheated by the Whig party, and he thought they were rather slippery; but the Republican leader had replied that he had been more frequently sold by the party with whom he had generally acted than by any other. (Laughter.) He (the speaker) merely asked to get the ticket with ADDAM MANN, Jr., and PRESTON KING on it for two, [applause] and their Western friends might have the other candidates arranged for as they liked, so far as he was concerned. He thanked the Convention for the attention it had given to his remarks, and wound up by asking to have that part of the resolution referring to the appointment of a committee of thirty-two on candidates stricken out. [Applause.]

OBJECTION IS MADE.

The Convention loudly called for the question, and the Chairman was about to put it, when Mr. WEISHT, of Albany, wanted to say a few words upon this occasion, in reference to the matter under discussion. He said, there was assembled two Conventions, each belonging to a different political organization, and it was proposed to establish a unity of action between them. He had no doubt but the Committee on Conference had concluded judiciously on this course, and had arrived at a conclusion that the ordinary plan would not meet the present circumstances.

He had strong sympathies in common with the gentlemen who had just sat down. But as they desired, he said, to act in harmony with another Convention, the question was how were they to do it? It had been suggested that the Whigs should come in here and swamp the party now in possession. He was opposed to that. They must keep separate if they desired to act prudently. But if kept separate, as they must, how could they harmonize? unless by some sure means as this Committee. He did not care who the candidates were, he went for the cause and nothing but the cause. [Applause.] He could see no other way in the present emergency to bring about a practical result than the way proposed. He was utterly indifferent, he repeated, as to who were on the ticket, provided such a ticket was selected as would carry the State of New-York at the coming election. [Applause.] If that Committee reported anything extravagant, their action was not binding on the Convention. He knew very well that in order to make a judicious selection, it was necessary to consult the wishes of all sections of the State, north, south, east and west. He had more confidence in the honesty of the gentlemen present than to suppose that any Committee appointed by them would abuse the trust.

With these remarks he would sit down, merely expressing the hope that the Committees would be appointed without further delay.

Loud cries of "Question" were heard.

A Delegate called for a vote on the first part of the report, viz: that referring to the appointment of a Committee on Platform and Resolutions.

The question on its adoption was put and carried unanimously

COMMITTEE ON NOMINATIONS.

The next motion was about to be put to the Convention, when Mr. JOHNSON of Delaware rose to ask how the Committee on Nominations was to be appointed.

Mr. BLUNT said it had been suggested that the members of this Committee should be appointed by the Delegates from each Judicial District.

A Delegate moved that the Committee on Platform and Resolutions, act as the Committee on Nominations. [Cries of No, no.]

Another Delegate moved that the Committee on Nominations be appointed by Delegates from each Senatorial District.

The last motion

MR. MARTINDALE SPEAKS.

Mr. MARTINDALE, of Rochester, ascended the platform, amid loud applause. This was a new era, he said, in the history of political parties in this State. For a long time we had been divided into parties. Now affairs had assumed a somewhat different aspect. We heard of the old battle cry of party, we have heard loud and universal cry of "Freedom!" It was not the duty of national organizations. It was a standard for the people of this country to say that the cry of freedom over the nation was the cry of a section. In leaving the Whig party, he felt it to join the National party. For himself he knew there was to be no disunion. Heaven knew that would be fair as a calamity. What! through cowardice and want of principle, let not a Union to be desired, and its dissolution was now to be greatly lamented. The encroachments of Slavery were no longer to be borne by freemen. The spirit of the heroes of the Revolution—the spirit of Democracy—the spirit which inspired the European masses and led them to this shore—would rise in its gigantic vigor and wrench the home and honor of this Great Republic. (Tremendous applause.)

MR. GILL TAKES TO WHAM.

Mr. GILL (the Secretary) came forward and made a speech, which was not received with the favor which, no doubt, Mr. GILL thought it deserved. He was almost down, but got a hearty cheer when speaking of Mr. SEWARD. [illegible]

Mr. ALEX. H. SHIPP (of Wayne Co.) referred to the speech of Gen. SANFORD, illustrated by the offer to PLEASANT WHERRMAN, after his imprisonment, of $2,000 from gentlemen having little or no personal acquaintance with him, but who sympathized in the cause for which he suffered. The speaker narrated the history of the Whig party, the encroachments of Slavery in the South, the blow to its rising health and strength him, and concluded by advocating the necessity on the part of the Republicans, of earnestly supporting and supporting the cause of Temperance. He concluded amid much applause.

It was now announced by the Chair that the Committees would report at 9 o'clock.

Mr. FRYER, of the Syracuse Reformer, took the stand in the interval and dealt at some length with the powers of Governments and the relations between the North and South.

SECOND DAY—THURSDAY.

THE CLOSING PROCEEDINGS.

[BY MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH.]

SYRACUSE, Saturday, Sept. 27.

The Republican Convention reassembled at 9 o'clock this morning.

HORACE GREELEY, from the Platform Committee, presented a series of resolutions which are the same as those reported to the Whig Convention.

After the reading of the Platform, JOHN W. STERRING of Monroe, Chairman of the Committee, submitted the following:

Whereas, A certain Convention of politicians in this State have made a party issue upon the law, prohibiting traffic in intoxicating liquors thus wresting its interpretation from the Courts and appealing from the expression of the popular will which debated said law, whenever

Resolved, That firmly believing the great principle of Prohibition to be right, we will resist the attempts now being made to prevent a trial of the practical workings thereof in this State.

Mr. STERRING moved that the foregoing be appended to the majority report.

After discussion, Mr. GREELEY moved that the resolution of Mr. STERRING be laid on the table. Lost—Ayes, 59; Noes, 108.

Judge CULVER moved, as an amendment, that the preamble and resolution of Mr. STERRING be adopted by the Convention as an independent proposition.

Mr. STERRING accepted the amendment to his proposition, and his preamble and resolution were adopted by acclamation.

The platform as presented by Mr. GREELEY, from the majority of the Committee, was then adopted by acclamation.

The Committee on Nominations, through Mr. ORIN of Rensselaer, reported for State officers the same names as those adopted by the Whig Convention, and the ticket was accepted.

A Committee was then appointed to notify the Whig Convention that the Republican Convention was ready to receive the Whig Convention.

At 11.45 A. M., the Whig Convention was ushered into Wieting Hall, and greeted with nine cheers and placed in the centre seats, the members of the Republican Convention dividing on either side of the Hall.

Mr. LITTLEJOHN, of Oswego, moved that the two Conventions in union ratify the platform passed by each Convention. Carried by acclamation.

Mr. BURNS, of New-York, moved the ratification of the ticket nominated by both Conventions.

JOHN A. King, President of the Whig Convention, seated by the side of Mr. FENTON, President of the Republican Convention, moved as an amendment, that the ticket ratified be given to the people of the State as a Republican ticket.

The motion and amendment were passed by acclamation.

ISAAC O. DALLON, of New-York, moved that the name of Republican be given to the new party. Passed by acclamation.

Mr. SPAULDING, of Buffalo, moved the Presidents of the two Conventions appoint a State Central Committee consisting of twenty-four. Passed by acclamation.

Judge GRAVES, of Herkimer, presented two resolutions which were presented by Mr. JENKINS at the recent Soft Shell Convention, and by that Convention rejected. They were passed.

Judge CULVER, of Brooklyn, then took the stand and made an eloquent speech on the action of the several parties in relation to Slavery, which was rather enthusiastically received. He concluded by marrying the two parties, and his peroration was received with thunders of applause.

He was followed by SILAS M. BURROWS, who endorsed the union of the two parties and gave his adhesion thoroughly to the Republican cause.

Several other speakers announced their hearty adhesion to the new party, when at 126 o'clock P. M., on motion of HORACE GREELEY, the Convention adjourned sine die.

THE YELLOW FEVER.

Decrease in the Pestilence.

The Baltimore papers last night brought us more cheering intelligence from Norfolk and Portsmouth, and high hopes are now entertained that the pestilence has been stayed in its desolating effects. The atmosphere at present is very favorable; the weather indicating the approach of frost. The deaths at Norfolk on Monday are stated to have been thirty, while there were but twelve new cases; and up to noon on Tuesday there was a marked decrease in both the deaths and the cases. The deaths at Portsmouth on Monday are reported to have been thirteen, and a correspondent states that but one additional death and two new cases were reported up to noon on Tuesday. This looks better.

We find in the Syracuse Standard the following letter from Miss ANDREWS, which, though it contains no news of importance relating to the pestilence, will be read with interest:

NORFOLK, Wednesday, Sept. 19, 1855.

MR. ——: According to promise I write to let you know that I am still in the land of the living, and in the enjoyment of good health. I am suffering much from fatigue. I had by one day from fatigue, and I have seen the account of my illness in the papers; and if you hear of it, I wish, for my friends' sake, you would contradict it, as it is false. I have read the account in the papers of my death.

I have nothing of importance to write, except that I cannot describe to you in words the suffering and privation I have seen since I have been here. You hear nothing but wailing and moaning. Two of the best physicians died here last night, and some of the wealthiest men. It is distressing indeed to see what I see. My heart aches for the unfortunate people of this city.

They say the fever is on the decrease, but it is because it can find none to kill. If the people return, there will certainly be another outbreak.

I have been here a number of weeks, and out of those nights I have slept a precious few. I do not know how soon I shall leave here, but not till the sickness is over with. I hope you and family are enjoying good health.

If you hear in the papers about my sickness, I wish you would contradict it, as it was only one day, and that from fatigue. I have nothing more to tell you, as the city is deserted and those who are here (except the Southern doctors and nurses) are sick. There is hardly a house that has not sickness in it.

I am very nervous from sitting up late at night, and most of the time all night. The Howard Association has just sent me a list to visit. I am waiting for the carriage: so adieu. Yours respectfully,

ANNIE M. ANDREWS.

The following is our latest telegraphic summary:

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Sept. 27.

At Norfolk the disease continues to abate, and business has been partially resumed. On Tuesday there were sixteen deaths and eight new cases. On Wednesday, up to noon, the number of deaths was six. Dr. CHARRIERE, of Augusta, is dead; Rev. Dr. JACKSON, of the Episcopal Church, ill, and Mrs. JACKSON convalescent.

At Portsmouth on Tuesday there were five deaths, [illegible]

DISASTROUS FIRE.—We learn from an extra of the Genesee Whig that a fire occurred at Flint on Monday evening, between 8 and 9 o'clock, which destroyed property on Main street to the amount of [illegible]. It originated in a dangerous school-house.

NEW-YORK CITY.

"Industrial Schools."

There are many among our readers who have taken a deep interest in the "Industrial Schools" for the children of the poor. It is well known to the public that their object has been to educate into industry and morality a class of children who had been below the influence of Public Schools or Sabbath Schools. The outcasts and dregs of the City—girls who afterwards would have been swept away into the wild life of crime, or have become the dependants on public charity—have been sought up and educated in these schools. Many are now in various portions of the country, repaying the labors which have rescued them, by steady and pure lives and by honest industry. The principle has been to get the influence of the refined and educated classes to bear on those, the lowest. The work has been done by ladies, who have left for a time their pleasures and pursuits for the disagreeable sights and experiences of a Charity School. It was during last year faithfully and perseveringly sustained, and met a rich reward. Thousands of miserable street-girls, who but for this would have been pests to the City, have been cleansed, dressed and habituated to industry, and stimulated to better morals.

There can be no doubt now in the public mind that it is a sound, practical enterprise. But those who are engaged in it would have it still better carried out. We believe that every lady who can spare her two or four hours a week to relieve the poor should lend a hand in these schools. It will be a good thing for the daughters of the wealthy and refined to connect them thus in sympathy with the destitute. No man or woman of generous nature can afford to be out of direct sympathy with the poor. We all need it, and most of all the prosperous and happy.

If anything will avert the dangers which threaten from these masses of brutalized people, it will be this bond between the hearts of the poor and the rich. In this country—and, indeed, in every Christian community—we seem to have the right to summon people to do what is for their own loss, if it be on the gain of the miserable. It is no rose-water philanthropy to take a class of ragged, filthy street-girls in an Industrial School. The work is hard, discouraging and disagreeable. It will be often answered with stupidity and ingratitude. It will sometimes end in utter disappointment and failure; but, we are glad to say, not often. The human heart reclaims itself, and shows that it is never beyond the reach of kindness and sympathy. Every one who has labored these last few years in our Industrial Schools will testify that there are rich and most encouraging rewards—natures of noble cast redeemed, for which it would seem too much toil and trouble could not be given; girls saved from stains of pollution; hard, brutal characters softened into tenderness and affection, and the friendless and forsaken provided with home and friends.

We desire now that each quarter should know where an Industrial School is situated, so that those who are interested can give their help. Two hours or four hours every week will be of great assistance, especially in the industrial departments.

In the lower part of the City, in the vilest quarter, with swarms of poor and dissolute about, is the Fourth Ward School, at No. 22 Oliver-street. This is ably superintended by the Second or Third-avenue Railroads. On the east side is the German Industrial School, in the midst of the poorest German quarter, at No. 14 Avenue C, reached by the Houston or Second-street omnibuses; the Wilson School, on Avenue A, near Tenth-street, taking in the poor population from the Eastern end of Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth streets. Above, on Perlitch-street, between Third and Second avenues, the East River School, drawing its poor children from the wretched hamlets of Dutch Hill and the shanties near the cuttaknts. In the centre, removed now to Sixth-avenue, corner of Thirty-eighth-street, the school of the Home of the Friendless; and opposite to the Crystal Palace, Miss Dow's Ragged School. Again, on the west side, the Hudson River Industrial School, in Twenty-eighth-street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues; and further down, the schools beneath the Church under Rev. Dr. HAWKS.

All these will want personal aid again this season. Our families who have had—what the poor have not—the opportunity of enjoying the pure air, and the fields and flowers and trees of the country this Summer, will now return, perhaps more ready to join in the great work of elevating the fallen humanity. We need new laborers, too, men and women. Who will put in their hand to prevent crime, lessen poverty, and to bring the light of education and Christianity to the degraded and outcast? C. L. B.

Collision—Narrow Escape.

About 7½ yesterday morning, as the ferry-boat Niagara left her berth for Peck-slip, the propeller Henry B. Beach, came up at great speed with a strong flood-tide. The ferry-boat stopped her engine, and as they came up almost bow to bow, the propeller swept along her starboard, smashing the windows and carrying away the wheel-house. The gentlemen's cabin was plentifully strewn with glass and splinters. The propeller dropped anchor near the foot of Grand-st., blew off steam, and remained there for some time, but what damage she sustained could not be ascertained. After some delay the Niagara reached the slip in safety. There was a great number of passengers on board, and had she been struck amidships there would no doubt have been a fearful loss of life.

Honor to Whom Honor, &c.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I was shown in your paper of Tuesday a justly deserved notice of Mr. BOOLE's fine portrait of Prof. PATTERSON. By some error the credit of its production was awarded to me. I regret to say that the fame belongs to Mr. BOOLE, and not to me. F. BOYLE.

Muggy Weather to Choose a House.

This fine weather we meet many citizens cruising in the outskirts, in Brooklyn, Jersey City, Hoboken and the new streets up town seeking for residences. They do not begin to look in earnest and openly for houses to rent until January, but they are "bobbing around," noting where nuisances prevail and where a clear air and pleasant street is inviting; studying where—if they should happen to raise the money, and feel like it—they would like to buy a neat residence and settle themselves. Every time the question of the purchase of a new carpet recurs, this subject is reintroduced. And this is one of those times when the Winter arrangements are being made, the stoves put up and the scores of little "and-so-forths" going down.

To all those seekers after homes we would suggest that though fine weather is essential to pleasant perambulation, muggy, wet, foggy weather is the sort to develop the nuisances. Then the hidden cattle yards and slaughter houses send up their noisome effluvia; then the soap and candle factories issue their sickening odor, and whatever there is of that sort abiding in a vicinity that should naturally disgust the sensitive, displays itself. Cherish your muggy days for just such unpleasant but profitable investigations.

The Third City of the Union—Coming Up.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Either the right worshipful Mayor of Brooklyn has eyes that see not and nostrils that do not smell, or he has not lately passed through Hicks-street from Atlantic to Crosby. That portion of the "Third City of the Union" has not been cleaned for several weeks, and the accumulation of filth there is enough to cause a pestilence. Yours, OWL.

P. S.—Friend Waggie suggests that the lower part of Atlantic-street is so particularly dirty as fairly entitles it to the title of the Third City in the Union for —— stinks, as HENRY WARD BEECHER would say.

The Liquor Dealers Send Aid to Norfolk.—The Liquor-Dealers' Central Committee of this City have subscribed nearly $2,000 within the past few days, in aid of the Norfolk and Portsmouth sufferers. The contributions will be forwarded to the Howard Society to-morrow.

[illegible] Committees on the City—The Hudson River Railroad.—The Committee on Railroads of the Board of Aldermen held a meeting yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the Councilmen's Chamber to hear parties opposed to the running of engines on the Hudson River Railroad below Sixtieth-street, as also those desiring omnibus cars to be run over the line of the track below Fifty-ninth-street. Councilmen REED, (Chairman,) SCHENCK and WAINRIGHT, of the Committee were present. A large number of property owners along the line of the road below the Sixtieth-street were in attendance.

Messrs. Ira Ostrander, Stephen Decker, Phillip Dater, Robt. Auld, Aaron H. Rock, Lewis Schaffer, Robert Bucher, C. C. Evarts, and Edward Donald, severally testified that property on the line of road below Sixtieth-street had depreciated from 25 to 40 per cent, in consequence of the use of locomotives, which they stated were usually run at the rate of from 20 to 30 miles an hour. The dangers and accidents occurring in consequence of this high speed, and by the frightening of horses, were represented to be numerous and serious; and the opinion was expressed that the removal of the locomotives, and the establishment of a line of omnibus cars from Sixtieth-street down, would greatly enhance the value of property on the line of the road. A good deal of indignation against the management of the road in this regard was expressed, and the Committee adjourned for one week, when an opportunity to hear the Railroad side of the story will be given.

Accident at Hell-Gate.

Yesterday, at 12 M., the British brig J. Sarah, Capt. MCALMON, from Hillsborough, N. B., with coal, when coming through the Gate was struck aback by a squall and driven ashore on the main land, above Jones' Wood. It was nearly high water, with a strong tide-way; but it is thought the vessel received no more damage than what was sufficient to sink her. She is but just submerged at the highest stage of the tide. Capt. TILLTON, agent of Underwriters, has made arrangements to discharge and raise the vessel immediately.

William Roach vs. —— Tuccacy, Captain of the Nineteenth Ward Police and four others.—The case reported in the TIMES of Tuesday, occupied the Court yesterday. Evidence was adduced for the defence to show that there were symptoms of a "muss" outside the house of the plaintiff, and much conflicting testimony adduced in justification, or extenuation of the forcible entry of defendants on the premises of the plaintiffs. His honor in his charge to the Jury went with great particularity over all the facts of the case.

The Breach of Neutrality Case.

Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, 27th.

The trial of HERTZ and PERKINS for a breach of the Neutrality laws, in enlisting men for the service of the British Government in the Crimea, was brought to a close this morning in the United States Court. PERKINS was acquitted and HERTZ was convicted upon all the counts. If Mr. HERTZ is guilty, as the jury has decided, he is only guilty as the agent of the British Government, and the latter, we can conceive, is in duty bound to assume the responsibility of acts they connived at, if they did not directly authorize, and not allow the penalty to fall upon their mere creature. We think that Mr. HERTZ would not only be justified in making an expose of the whole matter, but that he owes it to himself to make such an explanation as will bring to light the parties who instigated the offence for which he is made to suffer.

THURSDAY, Sept. 27—P. M.

Much interest will soon be felt in the forthcoming annual trade statement of the United States from the Treasury Department, to 30th June, 1855, the close of the financial year. The figures already semi-officially ascertained at the New-York and New-Orleans Custom Houses, justify the calculation that a most startling falling off will be reported in the aggregate Foreign Import Trade of the country, and the same data go to the effect that while the Export Trade in Domestic Produce also decreased materially during the Treasury year, the proportion was by no means equal to the decline in the consumption of Foreign Goods. We have deemed it not uninteresting at this time, when a new impetus is being given to our Export Trade, by means of an extraordinary Grain Crop, to present the following summary statements of trade movements of the past two Financial years—that for 1854, June 30, carefully taken from the official data in the last Annual Report of the Secretary of the Treasury, and that for 1855, June 30, made up in part from known results at New-York and New-Orleans, and in part from estimated figures at other ports. The first favorable feature to which attention will be directed in these comparative tables, is the fact relating to the ACTUAL CONSUMPTION OF FOREIGN GOODS.

1853-4—Treasury year	$279,719,187
1854-5—Treasury year	220,100,000
Decreased consumption	$59,619,187

The practical effect of this large retrenchment in the consumption of foreign fabrics last year, without a corresponding decrease in the export of Domestic Produce, is to produce this difference in

BALANCES—EXCLUSIVE OF SPECIE.

1853-4—Against United States	$64,554,693
1854-5—Against United States	31,115,000
Balance last year reduced by	$33,439,693

The Specie remittances the last Treasury year are known to have been $8,200,000 from New-York and Boston in excess of the previous year, and including San Francisco and other ports, they were not less than ten millions in excess. This fact, coupled with the foregoing regular Import and Export exhibit, produces this

DIFFERENCE IN BALANCES—SPECIE INCLUDED.

1853-4—Against U. S. (Treas. Report)	$36,525,555
1854-5—Favor U. S. (Estimated result)	16,565,000

The result is of course mainly due to the heavy retrenchment in the actual consumption of foreign goods in the interior, though in part to the rapid reduction made in mercantile indebtedness abroad by increased remittances in Specie from the seaboard cities.
